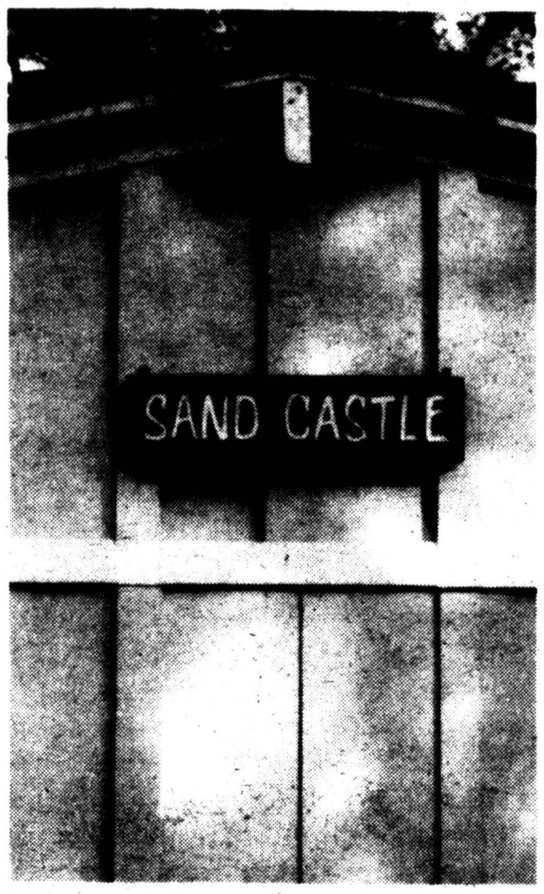
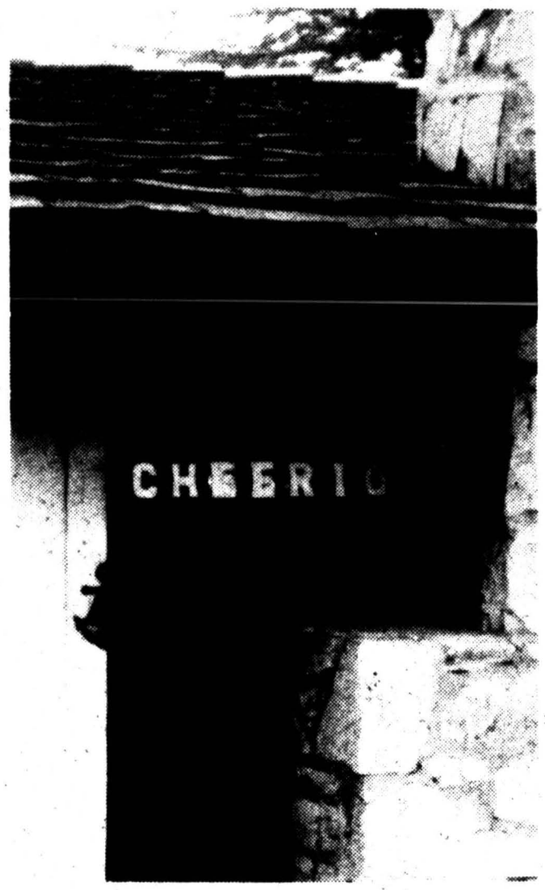
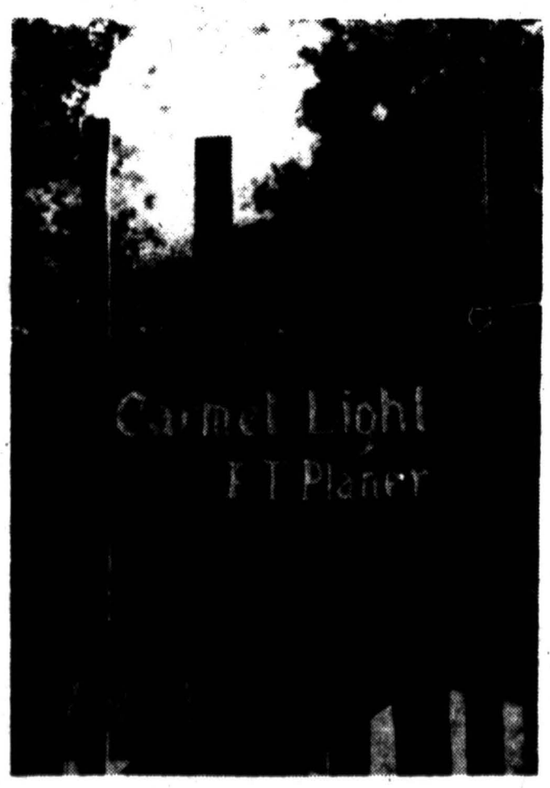
OUR 67TH YEAR, NO. 48 NOVEMBER 26, 1981





What's in a house name?

Comedy, poetry, romance, heaven!



By MICHAEL B. SMITH

CARMEL PROBABLY HAS more houses with names than any other city of its size in the country. Some names are cute, some are clever, some are banal and some are downright boring, but a few rise to the level of poetry in an economy of words that makes Haiku seem long-winded by comparison.

Many of Carmel's house names describe the sea, others speak of the owner's feelings about living here and still others refer to faraway places, flora and fauna or the personal quirks of the occupant.

No one knows for sure how the tradition of naming houses began here. "I can't remember who started the thing," says Bob Norton, who has lived in Carmel since 1903.

The most common explanation is that Carmelites, faced with numberless addresses, had to give their places some identity so that friends and visitors could find them. But in a way that begs the question, since it was Carmelites themselves who adopted the luxurious inconvenience of numberless houses in the first place.

Over the years residents became fiercely attached to their house names, and in 1929 fought down a move by the City Council to impose a numbered address system on the growing community. No one was actually lynched, but recall petitions did circulate before the Councilmen saw the error of their ways.

WHAT IS IT about the act of giving a house a name that many Carmelites find worth doing and defending, even today? Perhaps it is that in giving their houses identity, homeowners enhance their own, and contribute their bit to the special character of the community around them. What's in a name? A house by any other name would be...another house.

Most of the house names collected in these researches came from the area bordered by Ocean, Junipero, Santa Lucia and Scenic, because that's where most of the names are. Unscientific excursions were made, however, into regions of outer darkness beyond the magic grid — the Village north of Ocean, Carmel Woods, Hatton Fields, Mission Fields, Carmel Point and other benighted areas.

It was in Hatton Fields that we came across a poignant statement of what it can mean to lose a house name.

"We used to be Four Winds," said the lady of the house, "but now we're just a number." Others who live in numbered areas can, of course, keep their house names, and do.

SOME OF THE BEST house names in Carmel — fine because they are fresh, direct and descriptive — are Yellow Shutters, Rock Rose, The Winding Path, Song of the Sea, Fiddler's Green and the cutest pair of cottages in town, Periwinkle and Sea Urchin.

Practically every possible name describing the sea has been used by Carmel householders, one — Surf Song — three times. There are Seabar, Low Tide, Seastone, The Anchorage, Ocean's Breath, Sea Escape, Moods of the Sea, Harbor Lights, Trident, Sea Oaks, Fish Net, High Tide, Sea Gold, Drift, Sea Haven, Sea Cradle, Sea Mist, Sand and Sea, Ebb Tide, Sea Lure, Seaburst, Seadust, Seasweep, Everything but Seasaw.

Another popular category of house names incorporates the owner's name. Often this is simply done by using Casa followed by the

An open letter

Dear Editor:

A note my son had written to his grandparents caught my eye, and enclosed is an open letter I hope you will print:

Brad's letter began with, "I just finished playing my last high school football game and we lost again . . ."

Dear Brad, and to all the Seniors on the Carmel High football team and to Brett and all the other members of the team:

What you have gained this year far exceeds the win and loss record. You have learned from experience, talented and dedicated coaches. You have developed friendships that will last a lifetime and memories you will cherish even more as time passes.

You had team spirit rarely found anywhere except at the top of the league standings.

You demonstrated a great sense of humor and marvelous attitude about yourselves. You showed unshakable confidence in your abilities and an optimism that carried you through some pretty rough times.

You did develop that "character" everyone always talks about when using the old adage "losing builds character" and you brought us along with you.

You were appreciated and supported by your school at rallies and games and most assuredly on that unforgettable night in the rain against Pacific Grove.

I don't think any of us will ever forget watching you boys play valiantly in that storm while well over a hundred students stayed to cheer you on. Seeing those rain drenched, mud soaked cheer leaders yelling enthusiastically until the last gun sounded made me know the depth of the loyalty Carmel High students have for one another.

I'm sure as time goes by, we all will think of even more rewarding and enriching aspects of this season, but for now, you must know how very proud we are of you!

Love,
Mom

Too much football coverage?

Dear Editor:

I am shocked by the amount of publicity you have given Carmel High's football team. Last week I opened my paper to find two whole pages devoted to the football players.

I believe that public recognition is good for the young athletes, but your paper is leaving out some of the other sports. What about the girls' swim team? They haven't lost a meet in eight years. Yet you only write two small paragraphs compared to the football players' two pages.

Incidentally, the football team has not won a single game. These girls need support too. Their number of victories is a California record if not a national record.

I think you should give these girls a little more attention. I am tired of reading about how the football players almost won a game. Why not publish something a little more positive?

Political kick in the butt?

Dear Editor:

Come on people of Carmel! Wake up! Open your eyes! Do you know what is going on under your very noses? A political kick in the butt, that's what!

When a man spends 28 years of his life protecting YOU and your family, your business, your property, he deserves some recognition.

Who knows this town better than the back of his hand than Bob Fischer?

Who was on the beat at night, while you slept during the crisis years of the 60's? Bob Fischer.

Who knows the Carmel Police Dept. inside and out better than Bob Fischer?

There should be no question in anyone's mind who the next chief of police should be. None, whatsoever!

Come on people! Come on City Administrator and Town Council. You know I am right! Bring it out in the open, no more of these secret "meetings." People of Carmel — Wake up! You are being led astray!

I am ashamed to be a native of our once fine city. What has happened to you? Are you so hungry for the almighty dollar that you have forgotten how to feel? Have you really become so calloused?

I am appalled, ashamed, and sad that you would allow this kind of backbiting. It just makes me sick!

Why look elsewhere?

Dear Editor:

The three letters printed in your Nov. 19 edition, with reference to a new Chief of Police, summed up what many citizens of this community feel: Why go "outside" for someone when we have Captain Bob Fischer?

As former owners of a local business for over 50 years, we have known Bob on both a professional and personal level. He has always been straightforward and honest. We know him as a man of integrity, strength and compassion.

After his many years of devoted service to Carmel, Captain Fischer really does deserve the opportunity to be Chief of Police of his city and he is well qualified to fill this position.

So, again, why go "outside"?

Wants Bob Fischer for Chief

Mr. Doug Peterson
City Administrator
Carmel-By-The-Sea, CA

Dear Sir:

In regard to the problem of appointing a new Chief of Police.

I have known Bob Fischer as a personal friend for over 25 years, and in my opinion, he is a man of fine character and a hard-working, dedicated peace officer.

Bob knows every street, corner and building in our village, and most of the people who live here—including a lot of their problems.

I know that Bob is well-liked and has the respect of all who know him, including the so called "problem kids."

He has the knowhow and the ability to handle the job without discrimination and in a fair way to every one.

Bill Ellis has been a fine policeman and Chief and has highly recommended Bob. I am sure that after all the years they have worked together Bill Ellis should know.

I believe that Bob is the right man for the job and considering his 28 years of service and qualifications it would be a mistake to even consider an outsider for the position.

Why I'm grateful

By AL EISNER

THIS COLUMN is being written on my 51st birthday, and I'm on an "upper." I have been fortunate. My health (thank goodness) is excellent; I'm married to a wonderful person; my children are growing up, strong and healthy, breathing clean air; I earn a living doing what I enjoy most; and, I live in the most beautiful place in the world.

As a native New Yorker, I never cease to marvel at the ever-changing loveliness of Carmel and Carmel Valley when I drive in from our Carmel Valley home. I say a silent prayer every morning . . . a prayer of gratitude . . . Thanksgiving, if you will.

While other newspapers are full of bad news about inflation, crime, threats to peace, earthquakes, blizzards, famine, etc., your Carmel newspaper publishes an article and pictures about house names and signs. We can all say thanks for the "crime wave" exposed in the Police Log we publish every week.

So, assuming that you have heard and read plenty in other media about why you should be grateful, I thought I would express my gratitude a little differently.

I'm going to express my gratitude for what I am not.

I'm grateful, for instance, that I'm not a member of the Carmel City Council trying to give directions to the consultants who are trying to help revise the city's general plan. Most of the members of the Carmel City Council never tire of repeating the same old rhetoric about "saving Carmel," but haven't the foggiest idea of specific measures that would accomplish this noble purpose.

The General Plan process is supposed to provide the framework to develop such ideas. The city must move beyond the expression of noble ideas. It must originate specific legislation that will implement the lofty goals.

I'm grateful that I am not a land speculator in Carmel Valley. Just a couple of short years ago, I might have believed that I could reap big profits by building condominiums and houses to replace pristine meadows and hillsides.

Now, however, because of an alert citizenry, speculators are running for cover. The new Carmel Valley Master Plan will limit the allowable growth. As the Environmental Impact Report for the master plan is developed, new data indicates that the original densities envisioned in the master plan are far too high. As a land developer, I would have to compete with others for the privilege to build for profit. I'd have to devote more of the land to open space, use native materials in construction, refrain from scarring hillsides, and follow other guidelines for a committee that will judge the relative value of my project against others.

I'm awfully glad that I'm not a member of the Carmel Unified District School District board of trustees. Confronted with declining enrollment and shrinking revenues, the trustees are grappling with some pretty tough problems. Schools will have to be closed. Money will have to be found for teacher salaries.

Yet, every problem listed above (and many, many more that we face) could be construed as a challenge. Each presents us with an opportunity to move towards our mutual goals, if we can apply the needed energy and brainpower.

If the city will tackle the problems of parking, traffic, affordable housing and protection of our beaches and urban forest, then the laudable goal of "saving Carmel" will be accomplished. But, it will be done with ideas, not cheap rhetoric.

It will not be done if responsible members of the business community are categorically excluded from the process. The council is dedicated to protection of the interests of the residents of Carmel. By use of twisted logic, they assume that what's bad for business is somehow good for the residents.

In Carmel Valley, limits on growth and competition for the right to develop could give us quality development.

There is some skepticism that the "point" system for choosing developments will actually work. Yet, some mechanism must be applied to be fair to those who want to reasonably develop their property.

As for our schools, the growing support from volunteer groups like FOCUS (Friends of the Carmel Unified School District) is cause for optimism. The group raised $12,000 last week at the Allen Funt fund-raiser. The annual "Run for Funds" and other fund-raising events show grass-roots support for our schools. There seems to be a swing toward the "basics" — reading, writing and arithmetic — which is certainly a laudable objective.

So, while the problems persist, the opportunities beckon. We can all help to preserve the quality of life in our community by taking part in the process.

Then, when you give thanks, it will have special meaning.

Carmel Council to consider shifting local election dates

THE CARMEL City Council will consider shifting municipal elections from April to November when it meets at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Dec. 1 at City Hall.

City Administrator Doug Peterson will present the council with a report on the pros and cons of such a shift, based on a recommendation by Monterey County Registrar of Voters Ross Underwood.

A recent change in state law enables general law cities to change their municipal election date to coincide with the general election in November. The Monterey Peninsula cities of Seaside and Marina already have changed their election dates.

Underwood advised the city in a letter that a shift of election dates could save the city money and promote greater voter turnout.

Three council seats are to be filled in the April, 1982 election. They are the two-year mayor's seat held by Barney Laiolo, and the four-year council seats occupied by Howard Brunn and Mike Brown.

Peterson said he will have samples of ordinances passed in other communities to effect the election shift available in case the council wants to introduce an ordinance at its Dec. 1 meeting.

An ordinance to change election dates would require a second reading at a subsequent council meeting, and would then have to be approved by the Board of Supervisors, Peterson said.

Notices would have to be mailed at city expense to all registered voters in Carmel to inform them of the change.

In other business, the council will discuss controls that could be exercised over traditional problems associated with the July 4 observance on Carmel beaches.

Peterson is to present the council with results of a survey he made of measures taken by other communities to control noise, traffic, litter and vandalism on July 4.

The council meeting is open to the public.

New CV groundwater study may slash growth permitted under Master Plan

GROWTH LIMITS in Carmel Valley will have to be downscaled unless a public sewage system is installed, according to a just-completed $30,000 groundwater quality study study.

And the development capacity of the Carmel Valley Village area with septic systems already has been reached, says the report prepared by Montgomery Engineers for Monterey County and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors is scheduled to hold a study session on the study results at 11:30 a.m., Tuesday, Dec. 1 at the county courthouse in Salinas.

The study sets a limit of 8,550 housing units which can be built with septic systems, based on the ability of the underground water table and soils to absorb the wastewater.

That figure contrasts sharply with the maximum "buildout" of 10,400 units projected in the Carmel Valley Master Plan. That plan is under revision, based on an environmental impact report prepared under court order.

There are 4,000 housing units in Carmel Valley at present, and the Master Plan projects another 2,500 units by the year 2,000.

"This means that the projected 20-year development could be accommodated, but there are some areas in the Valley where you can put it and some where you can't because of groundwater problems," said Monterey County Environmental Sanitarian Walter Wong.

The study found that safe development limits already have been reached in the Carmel Valley Village area, based on the use of septic tanks.

"Existing development in the Carmel Valley Village-Schulte Road-Rancho Rio Vista area equals the septic system capacity of these areas to protect the groundwater," the Montgomery study concluded. "Growth must be redirected to other areas of the Valley."

The study recommends that additional growth in Carmel Valley outside the Village be limited to areas with soil percolation rates of one to 12 inches per hour and areas with soil depths of at least 15 feet. It recommends development be allowed only in areas with a slope of less than or equal to 30 percent, and on parcels at least one acre in size.

The Montgomery study analyzed the cumulative impact of future development on the groundwater quality of Carmel Valley from the standpoint of soil percolation, lot size, absorption and other factors.

Because of the impact of groundwater contamination upon the potable water supplies of the entire Monterey Peninsula, and because of implications for establishment of a development limit in Carmel Valley, the Montgomery study could have a major impact upon the final shape of the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

School district advised to get OK's

THE CARMEL Unified School District shouldn't attempt to sell 40 acres of undeveloped real estate it owns in Carmel Valley until a court-imposed development moratorium is lifted.

The real estate market isn't very good now, and the district could realize a higher return on its investment if it has approved preliminary subdivision maps, says a real estate consultant under contract to market those properties.

Helix and Associates of Concord advised the Board of Education Tuesday on the status of the three parcels of land and on strategies for their sale. Even if the board decided to attempt an immediate sale, it would take at least five months to close escrow, according to the Helix report.

The properties include a 20-acre site off Scarlett Road, a 10-acre site on Robinson Canyon Road just south of the Carmel River, and another 10-acre site on Carmel Valley Road just east of the Village.

They were purchased at a time when the district contemplated greater growth in Carmel Valley and increased student enrollment — neither of which has materialized. Because of a decline in enrollment and reduced state revenues, the board has decided to close two elementary schools by next fall.

Because it no longer needs the sites to construct new school facilities, the Board of Education has entertained the prospect of sale to generate additional revenues.

But the Monterey County Superior Court has ordered a moratorium on any new development in Carmel Valley until the revised Valley Master Plan can be adopted; that moratorium was recently extended to July of 1982. The school district can file a preliminary subdivision map but can not gain approval until the Master Plan is readopted.

"The board could consider selling the property now contingent on the approval of a preliminary map for development, or it could withhold sale until we complete the approval of a preliminary map," explained Daniel Helix, president of Helix and Associates.

"We're recommending that the board direct us to initiate the appropriate filings. Our intent is to increase the value of the property through residential development consistent with the Master Plan."

Helix said he isn't sure what the value of the three parcels of land is now, but estimated their value would be considerably greater if they were offered for sale with approved development plans.

"I don't think now is the best time in the world to be selling real estate," Helix said. "If the board said for us to go out and sell now contingent upon later development, we could do it but the return to the district wouldn't be as great as when it's developed."

Helix and Associates is under contract to the school district to evaluate the three parcels of land and to originate development proposals prior to sale. The firm would receive a commission comparable to that of a real estate agent upon completion of sale.

Raw sewage spill closes Carmel River

NO SWIMMING

This water shows a high degree of contamination and persons are hereby warned against using it.
BY ORDER OF
Monterey County Health Dept

WARNING SIGNS were posted at the mouth of the Carmel River last week by the Monterey County Health Department because of raw sewage spills into the river on two occasions from the Carmel Sanitary District treatment plant. The signs may come down this week if bacteria levels are within safe limits. (George Smith photo).

By ROBERT MISKIMON

WARNING SIGNS will remain posted at the mouth of the Carmel River at least until the end of this week because of a raw sewage spill from the Carmel Sanitary District treatment plant.

Monterey County Health Department officials posted the signs to prohibit swimming or bathing in the river after a power failure caused the spill.

The first spill occurred as a result of an electrical power failure Friday, Nov. 13 caused by a powerful rain storm which knocked out utility lines, said sanitary district manager Michael Zambory.

The second spill took place the following day, Saturday, Nov. 14, as a result of another wind-caused power failure.

The warning signs were posted Monday, Nov. 16 when the first samples of river water were taken for laboratory analysis, said environmental sanitarian Walter Wong. Results of that test are expected this week.

Under state law, two tests must be made which indicate that coliform (bacteria) counts are within acceptable limits before warning signs can be removed, Wong said. The second test sample was to be taken this Monday.

Zambory estimated that 360,000 gallons of raw sewage were poured into the Carmel River during the Friday power failure, and some 270,000 gallons during the Friday spill.

The failure caused a loss of electrical power to the three pumps which carry untreated sewage into the disposal plant, Zambory explained. However, a standby electrical generator was activated to supply power to only two of the plant's three pumps.

The result was that approximately one-third the normal treatment capacity of the plant was spilled into the river as raw sewage.

"This happens whenever we have too much flow," Zambory said. He indicated that the heavy storm runoff exacerbated the flooding from the treatment plant into the river.

"Whenever we have a torrential rain, it floods our system. There's no way it could have been prevented."

Electrical power to the treatment plant was disrupted from 2:50 p.m. to 11:15 p.m. Friday, Nov. 13, and again between 10:45 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 14, Zambory said.

The sanitary district treatment plant has a five million gallon per day capacity. It is fed by a 30-year-old pump station located on the opposite side of the Carmel River. The pump station operates with three, 20-horsepower pumps each with a 2.9 million gallon daily pumping capacity, Zambory said.

When all three pumps are operating normally, their combined capacity is 3,700 gallons per minute, but when only two operate "they can't handle the flow," Zambory said.

Wong said the sanitary district could have faced fines of up to $10,000 per day for the discharge, but its prompt reporting of the spill to both the county health department and to the Regional Water Quality Control Board averted penalties.

"Any time when you discharge sewage it's unsafe for human contact," Wong said. "We took the first test last Monday, and we plan to take another one this week. If both show acceptable levels of coliform, the signs will be removed."

It takes at least five days to process the test results, Wong noted. The area of the Carmel River lagoon near its mouth is always posted with warning signs because of a constant contamination problem caused by bird droppings.

The county health department makes regular tests of Carmel River water at several locations, but special test samples are taken whenever there is a spill of that magnitude, Wong said.

Zambory said the district plans to construct a new pump station as part of its $13.7 million water reclamation project, which would retain full pumping capacity even during a power failure.

S&L president predicts housing upturn

CALIFORNIA'S ailing housing market should start to show signs of recovery in early 1982.

At least, that's what Robert Adelizzi, president of Home Federal Savings and Loan, anticipates.

Home Federal recently opened a new branch office in Carmel at a time when financial institutions are in a state of flux and home mortgages are practically as scarce as hen's teeth.

The San Diego-based savings and loan association has established a track record of writing copious home mortgages, and it will stick by that policy even during these difficult times, Adelizzi said.

Assets of Home Federal are $5.3 billion, which makes it the seventh largest savings and loan association in the nation. Between 90 to 95 percent of the lending portion of Home Federal's business is comprised of mortgages, Adelizzi said.

But as the housing market — and along with it the home mortgage market — has declined, Home Federal's overall earnings have dropped. In the first six months of 1980, Home Federal posted earnings of $10 million, mostly from mortgages, Adelizzi said.

In the first six months of 1981, Home Federal's earnings declined to $2 million. But the bank remains committed to home loans and to the real estate market, he explained.

"We have a philosophy to continue to support the real estate market," Adelizzi said. "We still sell them, but not in the quantities we once did. A year ago we did $160 to $170 million a month in mortgages. We do about one-third of that today.

"We've always stayed in the real estate market and never abandoned it. Historically, we have been an exporter and seller of mortgages, but today there is very little market for mortgages because of the high interest rates." rates."

Adelizzi said the California Supreme Court's 1978 Wellenkamp decision on mortgage due dates has had "a very adverse effect on the financing of real estate in California."

That decision said clauses in mortgages written by non-federal lenders which make the balance of the mortgage due upon sale of the property are illegal. The Wellenkamp ruling, combined with the high interest rates in today's market, has severely restricted availability of mortgages, Adelizzi said.

All of these factors have made the ownership of a single-family home an ever more elusive part of the American dream, but the situation may soon start to improve, the banker predicted.

"We will start to see a slight decline in the values of real estate, which will be a start in the right direction," Adelizzi said. "We will have some contraction of real estate prices and the interest rates will decline.

"I hope that will convince the public to start buying again, because I believe buying and selling are as much a result of psychology as market conditions. In an unstable market, such as we have now, people put off a decision on buying a home."

ADELIZZI EXPECTS the beginning of a recovery in the housing market "during early 1982 if we have a continuation of relatively stable conditions."

He is somewhat cheered by a slight decline in housing prices in recent months, which he hopes will develop into a trend next year.

"Reaganomics" held the promise of greater fiscal recovery than has actually transpired, Adelizzi said.

"There would have been a better overall reception to President Reagan's policies if there had been more emphasis on a balanced budget before taxes were cut," he said. "His policies have created substantial controversy in the business community, which has had a debilitating effect on the success of his programs."

Tom Treanor, manager of the Carmel Home Federal branch office, explained two unconventional types of mortgages which his bank has made available within the last two weeks in response to current market conditions.

One is known as an "adjustable" mortgage, whose interest rate is variable and geared to a government-determined interest rate, Treanor said. The mortgage is written for a 30-year term, but payments may be increased and extended at five-year intervals by the bank to reflect changed market conditions.

The other is a 30-year mortgage with a set interest rate of 18.75 percent, which has a five year call date, Treanor explained. That means that the monthly mortgage payments are scaled to a 30-year payoff, but the balance of the note is due in five years.

"The purchaser takes out the mortgage with the understanding that the loan call date is in five years," Treanor explained. "At that point, they can renegotiate the loan or roll it over. We've only recently been offering these loans so we don't yet have a track record to see which people prefer."

One reason Home Federal can offer these "creative" mortgages is that the volume of savings has increased rapidly because of incentives such as tax-free accounts, Treanor said.

"We expect to start with mostly savings here in Carmel," he said. (R.M.)

City to join study for closed school

By ROBERT MISKIMON

THE CARMEL City Council will name one of its members to a Carmel Unified School District committee to study uses of vacated school facilities.

The City Council agreed with Carmel Woods School parent John Eatherton that the planned closure of that school would affect the city, and that the council should be involved with any decision on lease or sale of the site.

Because of an enrollment decline and reduced revenues to the district, the Board of Education has decided to close Carmel Woods and Carmelo elementary schools by next fall.

Although Carmel Woods School is located just north of the Carmel city limits, three council members felt that the disposition of that property could have a significant impact on the surrounding residential neighborhood.

Eatherton informed the council in a letter of his concern for the safety of his five-year-old son who will be transferred from Woods to River school next fall.

"When he and other children get older, they will have to walk or ride their bicycles right through the heart of our commercial district," Eatherton wrote to the council.

Lease of the Carmel Woods School site to another institution, such as the Defense Language Institute, would have a "disastrous" effect on the residential area, Eatherton said.

Lease of the school property could result in its use 24 hours a day; traffic volumes and safety problems would increase; and noise levels would be higher, Eatherton said.

"The school district will appoint a committee in the next 30 days to advise the board on school facilities," Eatherton told the council. "If we wait until this committee goes through all this legwork, they will be spinning their wheels if we as a city don't provide some input."

City Administrator Doug Peterson advised the council in a memo that traffic and noise impacts on the residential area from the potential lease of Woods School should be studied.

"It is premature for the City Council to take any narrow position at this time until the school district has further defined possible uses of this property," Peterson said.

Mayor Barney Laiolo noted that the two proposed uses of the Woods School property are lease or division of the site into nine residential lots for sale.

"Of all the school properties, this is probably the least likely to be used on a lease basis," Mayor Laiolo said. "I think they'd be inclined to revert that back to residential."

"IT MIGHT BE helpful if we did have someone representing us on that committee," added Councilman Frank Lloyd. "I support you in the suggestion that the property revert to R-1 residential use."

Lloyd suggested appointment of Councilman Mike Brown to the committee. Both Councilmen Mike Brown and Howard Brunn were absent from the council meeting.

"It would be to Carmel's advantage to be in on the planning process before the decisions are all final," agreed Councilwoman Helen Arnold.

The three council members approved a motion by Mayor Laiolo to appoint someone — preferably Councilman Brown — to serve on the committee at the council's Dec. 1 meeting.

In other business, the council approved an increase in housewatch fees provided by the police department, effective Jan. 1, 1982. Housewatch is daily inspection of the exterior of a vacant residence and a check of the doors by a police officer.

Carmel residents now pay $1 per month plus 25 cents per day for each day over four, for the housewatch service. That amounts to about $7.50 per month, said City Administrator Doug Peterson.

The increase approved by the council provides for free housewatch services for the first seven consecutive days, and a $1 daily charge thereafter. Even at that price, the city's service is a bargain, Peterson said.

"A private security firm charges a $12 per month fee for just driving past with absolutely no inspection," Peterson told the council. About 100 residences in Carmel use the service each month, and about half of them on a continuing basis, Peterson noted.

The council authorized the city administrator to investigate the possibility of a cooperative program with Monterey to process parking tickets. Monterey County has notified Carmel that it intends to charge $1.12 per traffic citation processed by the county, in addition to the 17 percent of citation revenues already retained by the county.

Estimated revenues to Carmel from parking fines for 1981-82 is $220,000. The county currently retains $46,345 as its 17 percent share of that amount; the additional charge would decrease the portion which goes to Carmel by $32,960, Peterson indicated.

"We're being given an offer we can't refuse by the County of Monterey," Peterson told the council. "It's very difficult for us to do anything but agree with them."

The council followed Peterson's recomendation to urge the county to delay imposition of the new fee until the 1982-83 fiscal year. If the county doesn't agree, the city will enter into a contract with the county which may be cancelled upon 60 days' written notice.

"An alternative would be for the city to process its own citations directly or contract for this service," Peterson advised the council. "With a change in state law, a number of small private contractors have gone into the business."

Peterson said it may be possible to work out some type of cooperative program with Monterey — which also has been hard-hit by the county fee — for independent processing of parking citations.

House names in Carmel speak of comedy, poetry, romance, heaven

owner's surname, as in Casa Laiolo, home of Barney Laiolo, Carmel's Mayor. But there are variations. In Carmel Point, for instance, The Village Smithy stands under the spreading Cypress trees. Back in the Village proper one finds The Garden of Allah, which is not named after the Moslem deity but after Al Alexander, its owner, who grows orchids.

Erinor is a combination of names referring to Ireland and Norway, the home countries of two ladies who lived there for many years. One died in 1976, and Erinor is her memorial.

There are two Marylands in Carmel, one with a hyphen and one without, but there is only one This Is the House that Jack Built, a charming stone-and-redwood cottage constructed 73 years ago by one Jack Reynolds.

There is Rejoyce, Swack's Shack and Tara, which has nothing to do with Gone With the Wind, being named by the Tara family. There is also a place without oak trees called Oaks, but that's all right, because Maude Oaks lives there.

There is even a house that became a town over on Lopez Ave., a settlement called Pisciottaville. Its population fluctuates between four and 10, says Jan Pisciotta, depending on the birthrate of the family's dogs and cats, and its elevation marker simply says "Yes."

A HOUSE ON TORRES named Lavender Hill is painted green. Not far down the street from it is another house painted two shades of lavender with a pink garage door. Its name? Bank and Tractor.

The man who opens the front door of Bank and Tractor is wearing an artist's smock and a beautifully trimmed beard, and has a Scottish burr that could drill through a tooth. In fact, it is not always easy to understand Lord Barclay Ferguson, and that is how the name of his studio came about. In telephone conversations he tells people his name is "Barclay, as in bank, and Ferguson, as in tractor." Lord and Lady Ferguson also own another house in Carmel called Heart's Gate, so named because they met here, and because he had heart surgery last year.

There are some truly egregious puns and novelty house names in Carmel. Carmelot, for example, or Peek-a-View, or Knot Very Lodge, a pun that occasionally convulses joggers on Scenic. That one was named by a lady who stood about four feet tall. When she lived in the house everything from the rooms to the furniture was scaled to her diminutive proportions.

Ta-Da! refers to a couple's joy on finally escaping Salinas. En Fin, meaning "at last," expresses similar sentiments. Fore is obviously the residence of a swinger, and two houses, Viewpoint and Point of View, are almost within viewing distance of each other.,

Two houses on San Carlos that occasionally slow traffic are called Thisisit and Thisisnt. The first belongs to artist Diane Wolcott, who put up her sign three years ago. The second was a prank of Doris Plubell, her next-door neighbor, who put up her sign "to tease her." To confuse matters more, Wolcott has now erected a model house to one side of her driveway called Halfofit.

CARMEL DOES NOT merely have houses, but also towers, castles, cottages, havens, doors and gates. There is Geranium Gate, Sea Gate, Ivy Gate and Garden Gate, but by far the most interesting is Moon Gate, a locked gate on Scenic that few Carmelites and fewer tourists have ever seen beyond. Inside is a striking Oriental mansion that serves as a museum for a magnificent collection of furniture brought from China more than 50 years ago. Garden gates in the shape of full moons look out over three terraced ponds to a bonsai tree below.

"In Carmel," says owner Larry Davis, who hails not from the Orient but from Grapevine, Texas, "it's almost a must to have a named house."

Nine Carmel householders have seen fit to name their homes after oak trees, versus four houses named after pines, three after cypress and only one for redwoods. There are, however, two places named Twin Pines and one called Three Pines. The Twig, a cottage, is next to The Branch, a house, and Cypress Song is protected by Cypress Alarm.

Enough birds, fish, animals and insects have lent their names to Carmel houses to populate a zoo, among them three sandpipers, two hummingbirds, two gulls, a hawk, a falcon, a canary, a pelican, a dog, a cat, a mouse, a butterfly, a whale, an ostrich, a spider, a fish, a squirrel and a goose.

Marge Watkins named her place The Mouse House because it is small, then decorated the house in a mouse motif that includes mouse knick-knacks, mouse dolls and a mouse music box that plays Hello, Dolly.

On Scenic there is Casa del Oso, which translates "House of the Bear." It is named after a former family dog, who looked like a bear, says the owner.

Flora are not nearly as popular as fauna for house names in Carmel, but ivy, pumpkin, rose, lavender and acorn are all represented, and heather blossoms thrice. Weather plays a small, but interesting part in the village namescape with Au Ciel, Sunbeam, Carmel Light, Rainbows and Sunshine Cottage.

As for foreign house names here, they come in Spanish, French, Latin, Gaelic, Hawaiian, Japanese, Chinese, German, Italian and probably others as well.

THERE IS A FINAL category of Carmel house names that reflects the opinion of many Carmelites that of all the places in the world to live, this is simply the best.

"There is a general sense of relief when you come to Carmel that this is the last stop on the way to heaven," is the way one longtime resident puts it.

Thus we have Casa de la Felicidad, Pax, Satori, Nirvana, Toujours Gai, Sanctuary, Casa Felice, Windfall, Mio Paradiso, Tranquillity, Sans Souci, Amicitia, and on past the last rosy blush of life's Horizons — also a Carmel house name, by the way.

The Mayor's Report

Other people's business is just that

By BARNEY LAIOLO

Once again we have been asked by an outside group to carry their problems to the Board of Supervisors. I refer to the Del Monte Forest group who is not in agreement with the Land Use Plan prepared and presented by the Board of Supervisors.

I must reiterate that most members of the Council have once again jumped on the band wagon to be the saviors of the world when they have not even seen the prepared plan! The reasoning used to support their thinking was the impact Del Monte Forest development would have on Carmel. Let's be reasonable . . . any change will have an impact!

There was no mention made of what impact the development of Cannery Row and its proposed new motels would have or, for that matter, who could possibly believe that the Crossroads and the Barnyard are not impacts on our town.

I repeat what I have said many times before: that we should "keep our noses out of other peoples' business." We have many problems of our own that should be addressed and each time we take on the great protective approach to be the savior we end up spending city money on attorney's fees, when in reality we could put it to a much better use in our own town. Charity begins at home.

At the last joint meeting of the City Council, the Planning Commission, the General Plan Advisory Committee and Earth Metrics I was accused by Mrs. Arnold of being "pro growth!" I guess suggesting the placing of City Hall where it was originally planned several years ago is "pro growth." I suppose that all the hours I have spent on parking studies for the benefit of all is "pro growth." I would like to emphasize to all that the only property I own in Carmel is my own home. I have no axe to grind. We just can't stick our heads in the sand and hope everything will be ok. There are common sense approaches to our many problems, and we should face each one with practicality and good judgment and not allow personal feelings to override the proper approach to this problem.

The joint meeting mentioned above proved to be a fiasco mostly due to emotional reactions. I do hope that a reasonable solution will be worked out, but should that not be possible, I would suggest we terminate the advisory committee and pay off the consultants, hire a city planner to work with our own planning commission and let's get the job done.

A reminder to all to be at the offical tree lighting ceremony this Friday night at 6 p.m. There will be singing and cider and hopefully the weather will help out to make the evening a true community event.

For those who are frequent users of "Housewatch" please be reminded that the rates and manner of billing have been changed. Anyone with questions should call the Police Department at 624-6403.

In closing . . . a reminder, "Those who really want to do something find a way; others find an excuse."

Still Smiling,
Mayor Barney

Business Beat

Down the aisle merger

By FLORENCE MASON

It's a merger! Harriette Mason and Dick Schofield are going to be married this Sunday, Nov. 28 at La Playa Hotel. That is a business as well as social note, inasmuch as Harriette is owner and Broker at Independent Realty Associates and Dick is sales manager with the same organization.

Don Bowen of IRA, who so much enjoys the business of selling businesses, has another one on the market: Skin Fits Leather Boutique in the McFarland Center. Owner Dee Borsella wants to try other interests after 10 years of selling high fashion one-of-a-kind creations. What people may not know: she has a very strong following with the Hollywood set through the mail order part of her business.

When Rita and Robert Seger sold Seger's French Country Look in The Barnyard last September, their next project was indefinite. No more!

In January, the Segers will open a showplace for their individual and collective talents. It is the house on Mission north of Fifth where Raggett Engineering used to be located. The building is going to be transformed into a house full of model kitchens. Yes — each room will be a different model kitchen, featuring top American and European cabinetry lines. That's Rita Seger's part of the business, along with kitchen planning and designing. Architect Robert Seger will work out of offices in the same building. The Segers also will continue to have a small display in the French Country Look.

After "looking and looking" in the area where they wanted to live, Walter and Claire O'Brien found Seger's French Country Look in The Barnyard. The new owners plan to continue operating the shop much as it has been.

It wasn't just this location — which they had visited many times from their home in Walnut Creek — that interested the O'Briens. It was also an opportunity for a change. O'Brien had been in real estate and Mrs. O'Brien was a teacher. At least for the present, they are both active in the store. When they are thoroughly settled, O'Brien may return to real estate.

"When it's so new, it's good for both of us to be here," Mrs. O'Brien said. "One of the first things we have been doing is meeting the sources for the unusual items we are selling. The Segers have been great about that."

Among the unique items are handmade quilts, country pictures, French porcelain canape and dessert plates, Faience animals and country French furniture.

The O'Briens have two daughters who live on the East coast, "doing their own thing." Their parents' "own thing" is jazz for O'Brien (he discovered fine sources for that pleasure in Monterey) and ballet and art for Mrs. O'Brien. They are renting a home in Carmel Highlands, but when there is time they'll be looking for their own home, perhaps in Carmel Valley.

Newly established in Carmel is a businessman for whom good vibrations are especially important: piano technician Russ Toutjian. His settling here is another example of Carmel winning over Lake Tahoe and its snows.

Toutjian and his wife, Claire, lived at Tahoe for two years, enjoying it as a summer place but disliking the wet, cold winters. They have moved into a home in Skyline Forest, and Toutjian will be servicing pianos throughout the Monterey Peninsula. As an amateur pianist himself, Toutjian was attracted to this area not only by the climate, but also by the abundance of cultural and musical events offered.

This skilled technician has been tuning pianos since he was 14. A third generation of Toutjian piano technicians, he learned his skill from his father who, in turn, learned from his father in Armenia. First, the family built pipe organs, a business that boomed in the days of silent movies and vaudeville. Later the Toutjians turned to piano tuning, including those of such famous artists as George Shearing, Andre Watts and — double challenge — Ferrante and Teicher.

Mrs. Toutjian has also started a business in this area as a Mary Kay skin care consultant. Her husband said that their move to this area is permanent. He doesn't expect to be tempted to return to Tahoe even when he travels there to service the pianos of longtime, loyal customers.

They met on a tennis court, discovered a mutual love for cooking, and as a result Jodi Hermans and Arlene Lopez established a new business: The Food Affaire.

It's unique in that the partners' specialty is catering dinners for two. Not that they wouldn't consider a request to serve more, but they do want to have their business known for something special and specific. It is what they had been doing for friends; now they want to extend the "dinner for two" concept to others. They even offer gift certificates so a friend or relative can line up a dinner for a twosome on their Christmas or birthday gift list.

Most of the food preparation is done in the Pacific Grove home the two share. Final preparation and serving is carried out in the customer's home. Their advertisement says, "Intimate dining in the comfort of your own home." And with none of the work usually involved, the diners can concentrate on each other — and the food.

Usually, each dinner is selected from a group of preset menus Ms. Hermans and Ms. Lopez have already created. Their experiene has been that the diners want it that way. However, special menu requests are fulfilled.

Jodi Hermans came to this area three years ago from the San Francisco Bay area where she had been a model. She worked as a cocktail waitress at the Sardine Factory and serves in that role at Sly McFly's. . .at least until The Food Affaire catches on and takes all of her time. Partner Arlene Lopez came from Pasadena one and one half years ago, and is very pleased that a liking for tennis led to this business venture — adventure — for her.

Another new, unusual and individual business has opened in Carmel. Laura Converse, already known locally for her acting and dancing, advertises that she will organize your (or my) cupboard, closet or papers. Ms. Converse said, "It's one of my natural proclivities. I've been doing it for friends, and they encouraged me to offer it as a service. You have to be creative about employment in this area!"

The many-talented Ms. Converse also does gardenting, sells her own and a friend's art work, and trains in dance at Hidden Valley. She has some very special ideas about what "performance" should mean. Her most ambitious goal is to develop a repertory company of actors and dancers, and is actively pursuing grants that could make this dream a reality. In the meantime, being well organized herself, she can help others acquire that same pleasant condition.

Perhaps surprisingly, it is getting harder and harder to buy antiques. At least that is what one new Peninaula dealer, Jerold B. Whitney, told the Business License and Code Review Board recently.

Whitney should know as he has operated an antique store in the San Francisco Bay area for 10 years. Now he hopes to have his Carmel shop open before Christmas. The shop will be on the north side of Seventh between San Carlos and Dolores, former location of the Tor Foundation office. It's a small space toward the back of the courtyard, Whitney said. His specialties will fit in well, as they are the smaller antique items, plus "accessories" such as candlesticks and paperweights.

Whitney and his business partner, C. D. Pinkerton, are weekend commuters for the present.

Jim Groves, making his formal appearance as the new owner of Village Market at the same meeting, assured board members that he was taking a firm stand against selling beer to juveniles. New signs have been posted in the market to warn beer and liquor purchasers that they should be prepared to show their I.D.s. Acting Police Chief Bob Fischer expressed the appreciation that all the board members apparently felt for Grovers' plan of attack on this problem.

As of Nov. 12, only eight Carmel businesses remained on the delinquent license fee payments list. They may face court appearances.

It sounded as though it must be a joke, but I'm told it is the truth — honestly. It is against the law to wear high heels while walking in Carmel! That's because of an old ordinance still on the books. Capt. Fischer said it's one reason why officers investigating a fall on city property always inquire as to the type of footwear worn by the injured person.

GLEANINGS:

• Attorney David Larendo of Carmel Valley was named Jaycee of the Month for October. That's mostly because of the first-rate job he did as chairman of the Monterey Peninsula Jaycees' Halloween progressive dinner.

• The overwhelming interest in the San Francisco Opera Production of Aida, starring Pavarotti, reached our Peninsula: there was at least one ad in the Monterey Herald offering seats. . ."best offer over $500"!

• Good baby sitters must be hard to find. One recent ad offered inducements: "Friend can come. . .smacks provided."

• What do you do with loads of pine needles? You spread them in your yard to help suppress weeds! That's what is back of one Carmel Valley woman's offer to pick up bagged pine needles garnered from local driveways or gardens. . .for free.

DATES AHEAD:

The annual Carmel tree lighting ceremony: Dec. 4. Wouldn't it be fine if some of the newer businesses about whom we have been writing were to win Christmas trimming awards? Entry forms are in the Carmel Business Association newsletter or can be obtained at CBA headquarters; winners will be announced at the tree lighting ceremony.

The 10th annual Spalding Invitational Pro-Am Golf Tounament is Dec. 30-Jan. 3. Prize money has been increased by $15,000 to $150,00 and for the first time, Carmel Valley will be brought into play: the CV Golf and Country Club will replace Spyglass as one of the four golf courses used by the participants — 336 amateurs and 112 touring and club professionals.

The Crosby will be a little later than usual: Feb. 4-7.

General Plan consultants defend thei

GENERAL PLAN Advisory Committee members (from left) John Eatherton, Dr. Donald Davidson, and Jean Grace joined in the discussion of the general plan revision process.

By ROBERT MISKIMON

EARTH METRICS, the Burlingame consulting firm hired to update the Carmel general plan, defended itself after a drubbing at the hands of councilmen, planning commissioners, and a citizens' advisory committee in a joint meeting last Thursday.

Thrust of the criticism was that the out-of-town firm had failed to comprehend that special "something" about Carmel and to communicate adequately in development of draft proposals for the general plan.

The result is that two council members, two planning commissioners, and two city staffers are to meet with Earth Metrics representatives to see if the contract can be revised to reflect better communication, or to dissolve the agreement.

The meeting had been billed as the first opportunity for Carmelites and their elected officials to have some hard proposals to sink their teeth into. Instead, fangs were bared and tempers flared.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold expressed outrage at the repeated use of the expression "tradeoffs" in the draft proposals submitted by Earth Metrics for discussion. The draft followed four public meetings on the general plan held by the General Plan Advisory Committee.

"The use of 'tradeoffs' implies that we must bargain with some sort of adversity," Mrs. Arnold said. Earth Metrics representative John Ryan said he would be happy to substitute "options" for "tradeoffs" in the document.

"I see nothing here that has to do with the peculiar character of Carmel," said Jane Mayer, a member of the General Plan Advisory Committee. "It's terribly important to get citizen input and yet there hasn't been much. I don't think it's a question of apathy; it's a total business of giving up."

"I don't feel the public has ever been told the gravity of the general plan process," said advisory committee member Les Gross.

"These people are living in the paleolithic," boomed planning commissioner John Logan, in reference to Earth Metrics. "This is lousy."

Councilman Frank Lloyd said he was shocked at references in the draft document to rail and water transportation facilities which would serve Carmel.

"This is a completely unacceptable document," said committee alternate Gene Hammond. "I suggest we send Mr. Ryan back to Burlingame and have him come back with something that relates to Carmel."

KAY RANSOM, vice-president and director of planning for Earth Metrics, said the firm has completed 25 contracts to update general plans in California cities in the eight years it has been in business.

"There is no need for us to be defensive," she said. "We've been in the business eight years. A lot of times people don't like consultants. All consultants experience this at times, when people don't want any outside advice.

"We are well-qualified to perform this work. The community has raised some questions about our ability to listen, and we intend to sit down with the city and to work out these concerns."

Ms. Ransom was not at the Thursday meeting because of illness, but she has been present at prior meetings of the advisory committee. She expressed chagrin that none of the specific draft proposals was discussed.

"The first draft is always subject to a lot of criticism," she said. "It's unfortunate they weren't able to move the meeting to discuss specifics. In Carmel, there isn't a consensus about these issues. There is a lot of diverse opinion in Carmel about the direction of the general plan."

In response to a question from planning commissioner John Logan about the inclusion of a reference to rail and water transportation links to Carmel, Ms. Ranson said those were mentioned "in a regional context."

"We're required by law to look at the region as well as the city when we do a general plan," she said. "They were mentioned only in a regional context; they're not ir work after drubbing by city officials

active in Carmel."

Some of the controversy over the draft stems from "the community's desire to write the plan rather than having the consultant write it," Ms. Ransom said. "The contract specifies that we shall write it based on extensive public participation.

"All along there's been some question whether the consultant or the committee should write the plan. Our role as the consultant is to write the plan; the advisory committee is to give public input. The City Council has final approval."

Councilman Mike Brown told fellow council members, planning commissioners, and committee members the city ought to get another consulting firm.

"I think we ought to consider paying Earth Metrics off and reactivating the whole thing," Brown said. "We should start all over and get a different company to do this for us."

"I submit that this is rather hopeless," said Councilwoman Arnold.

BUT COMMITTEE member Jean Grace had a different view of the situation.

"The whole purpose of this draft is to get this kind of steam up," she said. "This is great! Let's discuss these elements. Let's get excited and argue. That's what it's all about."

City Attorney George Brehmer interjected that Earth Metrics, in his view, had done the job it was hired to do.

"You're mining a rock that looks like it might be shapable, just like Michelangelo carving the Pieta," Brehmer said. "But you don't even have the rock out of the mountainside yet. It seems to me that Earth Metrics is progressing, at least in terms of what we asked them to do."

Alan Williams, an alternate member of the General Plan Advisory Committee, protested that "we're floundering without any sense of direction.

"Earth Metrics has got to get their act together. This meeting ought to be rescheduled at their expense. Earth Metrics' responsibility is to conduct the meetings. As of right now, we're flaky."

Councilwoman Arnold said she was distressed by statements in committee minutes that "there will be some sort of time sharing" in Carmel, although "we have a 3-2 majority against time sharing on the council."

"We are not communicating," Mrs. Arnold said. "We do not have a good basis here to communicate with. It's time to scratch the board and start all over again."

A motion by Councilman Brown to have city staff meet with Earth Metrics to either improve or dissolve the $50,000 contract was amended to allow a council-planning commission-staff panel to meet with the consulting firm.

As part of the same motion, three of the four council members voted to replace absent Councilman Howard Brunn on the general plan steering committee with Councilwoman Arnold. Mayor Laiolo voted "no."

"We have have erred in abdicating our responsibility by allowing the two growth-oriented people on the council to be on the steering committee," Mrs. Arnold said. Mayor Laiolo is the other council representative on the committee.

BOB STEPHENSON, chairman of the Carmel Planning Commission, was pensive as the debate over the consulting firm raged last Thursday.

COUNCIL members Frank Lloyd and Helen Arnold both expressed displeasure at the proposed goals and objectives for revision of the general plan presented last Thursday by Earth Metrics.

Friends surprise Richard Zahm with birthday gala

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

Surprise birthday parties often take a lot of sneaky planning, but things went off like clockwork recently when friends of Richard Zahm hosted and toasted him to a wild and wonderful birthday bash.

The big event took place Saturday, Nov. 14, at the Zahm's unusual Pebble Beach home. The couple have been living in Pacific Grove while waiting for the remodeling of their new home to be completed. All of this worked perfectly for Nancy who had to find a way to get Richard to drop by the ranch house to pick up something. Actually, Richard thought he was headed to a black tie dinner to be given in his honor by good buddies Russ Harris and Bud Allen.

So, while Richard was getting all gussied up in his black tie gear, about 60 of his friends were dressing in casual or "Roaring 20's" attire and preparing for an old-fashioned barbecue.

The Zahm home in Pebble Beach is remodeled stables that were part of the Harry Hunt estate. Richard and Nancy have done extensive work to turn the place into a unique home. The original stables consisted of grooms' quarters and 12 stalls which were used to house two teams of polo ponies. What is now the living room was originally the tack room. The feed room is now a bedroom, and six of the stalls were turned into a bedroom wing. Another little room which the grooms used is still intact as is the original kitchen.

Things were mouse quiet when the Zahms arrived and Richard was completely awestruck when all the faces showed.

The evening included the big band sounds of music echoing from an old Wurlitzer jukebox. Steaks were barbecued to perfection by John Wilson who does this type of work as a hobby and then turns his salary over to charity.

The affair really was a sit-down dinner with tables placed in various rooms. Nancy quickly created some floral bouquets, and naturally there were candles.

Those wishing Richard a "happy birthday" included George and Betty Yates, Mark and Hope Raggett, Colden and Betsy Whitman, Dick and Adele Rudy, Ron and Joey Cobley, Dick and Claire Berlin, Dick and Barbara Hammond, Jerry and Mary Martin, Blair McDonald who was with Diane Martin, Yano and Pat Bordonaro and Jack and Sally McQuary.

Dick and Lee Tevis were also there, and Lee wore a lovely beaded "20's" dress which she purchased in Paris. Also there were Patricia Hunt and Mayor Barney with his Elinor who were later seen at an Eastern Star meeting and still later at the Allen Funt benefit reception.

Also joining the celebration were Nancy and Jack Currier, Florence Drake, Fred and Pauline Stanley, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cate, Mel and Mary Bristow, Dick and Sheila Collins, Dr. Charlie Snorf, Shirley Bialek who was with Peter Herrick and Dr. Thomas Moore from San Francisco.

The party continued to the wee morning hours. The following day, the Zahms invited Bud Allen and Dr. Thomas Moore to lunch. Richard decided it was a perfect time to show off his new horse. Still feeling spunky from all the celebrating Richard put the beatuful thoroughbred into a run — took a spill — and ended in the emergency room at Community Hospital getting a dozen or so stitches in his hand. What really bugs Richard is that for the next two weeks he won't be able to participate in his new hobby of scuba diving.

Time to crack that bottle of Ripple, Richard!

SUSAN COMES HOME FOR HER WEDDING

This is a very special Thanksgiving for Susie Snorf who will marry James Lansbury tomorrow, Nov. 27, at the Carmel Presbyterian Church.

Susie was raised in Carmel and graduated from Carmel High School before attending USC where she met Jim when both were freshmen. Both now live in Manhattan Beach where Susie is marketing manager for Mobile Oil Corp. and Jim is an agent for the Charles Lidell Talent Agency.

The traditional Thanksgiving dinner, held at the Pebble Beach Lodge, became the "rehearsal dinner."

Both Susie and Jim have some very famous people in their families. Actress Angela Lansbury is Jim's aunt. Susan's grandfather, Howard Buffett, and Jim's grandfather, Robert Kean, knew each other while serving together in the House of Representatives.

Susie's parents are Mrs. Hilton Bialek and Dr. Charles Snorf. Her sisters, Cynthia and Carolyn, will be two of her bridesmaids.

Following the ceremony a reception will be held at the Beach and Tennis Club; then the couple will fly to Hawaii for their honeymoon.

Congratulations Susie and Jim!

LOCALS HOLD THEIR FAMOUS TAILGATE FEAST AT STANFORD

Local football fans and Stanford Alumni wrapped up the season with another one of their famous "Tailgate Feasts" at Stanford this past weekend. It was the last big game of the season (Stanford vs. California) so Dick and Clare Berlin, Doug and Mary Graham and Dick and Betsy Nuckton, as well as other members of the "cheering section" from Los Angeles and Palo Alto, got together for the grand finale.

Following the game, the group went to work preparing such things as chili and barbecued steaks. Doug, who recently won first prize over eight of his buddies in a chili cookoff, had the honor of working the bean pot while Clare had a bit of fun by appearing in a maid's uniform.

At last week's game (Stanford vs. Oregon with Stanford the winner) Dick B. had planned to barbecued the spareribs — but when Jack Currier (former owner of Rocky Point Restaurant) discovered what Dick was up to, he decided to outdo his friend by sending along his famous old Rocky Point ribs. Jack was determined to prove his chef supremacy over Dick.

Joining in this particular get-together were Brick and Hattie Holstrom. As most of you already know, Brick is a retired general who served with General James Dootlittle's Raiders.

With the football season kaput, you can just bet that this group of "tailgaters" will think up a new form of entertainment!

OLD-FASHIONED CARMEL CHRISTMAS

Therese Donath is one of those people who can get behind a worthy cause and give it a good push. Right now, she has holiday festivities on her mind and such is the reasoning behind her idea for a Therese Donath and Friends First Annual Christmas Reunion. The dance affair will benefit the University For Man of which Therese is assistant director. Music will be by Ace Hill and his group.

The fun will begin at 8 p.m., Dec. 5 at the Armed Services YMCA, El Estero and Webster. Donation is $6 at the door and $5 for advance tickets.

Next on Therese's list is an Old-Fashioined Carmel Christmas to be hosted by UFM at the Carmel Boy Scout House, Dec. 19. There will be a get together from 4 - 6 p.m. and another from 7 - 10 p.m. Along with sipping steaming wassail, singing carols and reading traditional Christmas stories, everyone will be invited to create paper chains and popcorn decorations for the Christmas tree. Donation is $1.50. For more information telephone 373-2641.

More current on the agenda is UFM's semiannual arts and crafts fair which will be held at the Custom House Plaza, Fisherman's Wharf, Nov. 28 and 29. no different. All signs of Friday's big storm were completely gone so the 100 or so guests were able to enjoy the Criley's garden as well as their lovely home.

Most of those attending were long time Carmelites including Frank and Marge Lloyd, Dan and Lilith James and Don and Rose Doner.

There was so much food that it's impossible to name each item, but the hickory smoked turkeys and rare roast beef were favorites.

The Criley's daughter, Megan, has been with the Peach Peace Corps in Ecuador for the past year. She has another year to go, and there is the possibility that she will extend for even another year. Megan has been working in agriculture. Her new assignment will be an archaeological project and she is looking forward to working on the "digs." Megan also is keeping a journal, and hopefully she'll share it with us when she gets home.

COMMUNITY HOSPITAL AUXILIARY HAS ANNUAL GIFT FAIR

Fountain Court at Community Hospital was filled with that good old Christmas feeling last Saturday when auxiliary members held their annual Gift Fair. This fundraising affair always is a gala event and gives those connected with the hospital the opportunity to get in a bit of early Christmas shopping.

The items are purchased by the hospital gift shop especially for the fair. The choice this year included gowns, robes, jewelry, toys and numerous other items, such as an electric car which was donated for the event.

The gift preview for men only was held last Thursday night. Along with all the fun and frolic, the gents were able to purchase lovely items for their wives or girlfriends.

From the hospital comes word of a rumor circulating that there is a waiting list for volunteers. "Not true," says Ruth Broughton, public information director for the auxiliary. She said there are always openings for volunteers and that the next orientation date for those wishing to join the auxiliary will be Jan. 9. Forms are available at the hospital or will be mailed on request. Anyone wishing more information should telephone the auxiliary office, 625-4556.

Storm fails to dampen Stillwater installation

It doesn't pay to fool Mother Nature especially on Friday the 13th. The rain came, the wind howled and the power at the Beach and Tennis Club went kaput — and all on the night that members of the Stillwater Yacht Club had planned their Commodore's Ball and annual dinner meeting, Nov. 13.

Well, old Mother Nature forgot that there are such things as candles, gas ranges, and musicians who can chuck their electronic equipment for such things as drums, regular guitars and a piano or two.

Guests ignored the fallen tree across the road just inside the Carmel Gate and found other routes to get to the gala, which certainly went on just as scheduled. Besides, what could possibly be more romantic than a candlelight affair!

And, the wet stuff was no damper for the dress of the evening as everyone arrived decked out in their best bibs and tuckers to enjoy an evening of cocktails, a roast prime rib dinner with all the trimmings, including Baked Alaska — and to dance to the music of Neil Armstrong and his orchestra.

Later in the evening, Commodore Clint Harvey presented the Stillwater Yacht Club with a commodore's burgee to be presented each year to the new commodore.

Special guests at the gala included Commodore and Mrs. Hal Winner of the Monterey Peninsula Yacht Club.

Trophies were also rewarded. Winning the Matthew C. Jenkins Regatta were: Mark Lord, first; Ellie Wood, second; and Lee Gould, third.

Winners of the Stillwater Deepwater Race were: Lee Gould, first; Diana Marks, second; Don McLean, third.

The Fleet Championship Series was won by: Mark Lord, first; Lee Gould, second; and Eric Axelsen, third.

Samuel F.B. Morse Regatta awards went to Tom Duffy, first; Paul Moose, second; and Court Hanson, third.

Those attending the gala included Commodore and Mrs. Clint Harvey, Dr. and Mrs. Don McLean, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Craig, C. Hanson and date, Mr. and Mrs. John Konigshofer, Mr. and Mrs. George Yates, Mr. and Mrs. Rex Pressey, Mr. and Mrs. Soren Axelsen, Mr. and Mrs. John Riggin, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Raggett, H.S. Towle, Mr. and Mrs. Elly Wood and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Gould.

Others were Mr. and Mrs. Gordon MacKenzie, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Zahm, Nancy McCullough and Mr. A. Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Winner, Jack McAleer and date, and Mr. and Mrs. Matt Jenkins.

'Wellness' lecture set for Sunset

Debra Lawrence, a counselor who teaches "wellness, a system for physical, mental and spiritual rejuvenation," will speak at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 2 at the Chapman Room of Sunset Center, Carmel.

Her topic is sonics, the science of sound, which she describes as the medicine of the future. The proper application of sound, she says, can put you in touch with the source of your love for life and your own individual self-expression.

"Sound works for you as a tuning fork is used to tune a musical instrument," she says. "Explore its exceptional rejuvenating, transformative power."

Exploration fee is $5. For more information phone 649-1001, ext. 93.

Boy Scouts honor Janet Crego

The Boy Scouts of America has presented the Award of Merit to Janet W. Crego upon the recommendation of the Peninsula District of the Monterey Bay Area Council.

The highest award authorized for presentation by a Scout District, the Award of Merit, is for outstanding service to youth of the community through idealism and citizenship. The presentation was made on Nov. 13 at the Peninsula District Dinner at Fort Ord.

Mrs. Crego was cited for her service to youth that began as a Girl Scout leader in France and Louisiana. Later, she became a Den Mother for Cub Pack 48 of Carmel and a supporter of Carmel Little League. She has also served as Advancement Chairman for Boy Scout Troop 3 and as an active supporter of the Carmel High School varsity baseball team.

Mrs. Crego has been instrumental in establishing a study collection of freeze-dried birds and mammals (road kills) for use at the Nature Lodge at Camp Pico Blanco.

In her role of "Mother Nature," Mrs. Crego has touched the lives of hundreds of young cub scouts and boy scouts and has instilled in many scouts a lasting interest and appreciation for nature and our environment. She has also taken biological specimens to the public schools in Carmel to acquaint students with nature.

Both of Mrs. Crego's daughters were Girl Scouts and her son, Van, is an Eagle Scout. Her grandson, Christian Brian Powers, is a Tenderfoot Scout (soon to be second class) in Troop 176 of the Denver Area Council, Denver, Colo.

Sanitary District ponders Pebble Beach 'olive branch'

By ROBERT MISKIMON

AFTER MONTHS of feuding, the Pebble Beach Sanitary District has extended an "olive branch," but the Carmel Sanitary District isn't ready to accept it yet.

Richard Lord, chairman of the Pebble Beach board of directors, asked the Carmel board last week to appoint a joint committee to explore ways the two districts can cooperate.

His request last Thursday came after Monterey County Judge Richard Silver took under submission a lawsuit by the Carmel district which seeks to force Pebble Beach to pay one-third of local costs of a water reclamation project.

That issue has been a longstanding bone of contention between the two districts. Pebble Beach, according to Carmel's calculations, owes some $200,000 as its one-third share of the design phase of the project.

"I come forward with an olive branch," Lord told the Carmel board during its regular meeting last week. "Now that we've finished out trial and got out of our system the 'I'll sue' syndrome, we don't think we've won anything.

"There are a lot of things we should look at together, and it seems to me you have a wonderful opportunity with two presumably objective members to be seated on the board of directors."

John Floyd and David Tedrow will be seated to four-year terms of office on the Carmel Sanitary District board of directors next month, to replace James Pruitt and Vernon Head.

The Carmel and Pebble Beach sanitary districts are separate political bodies, but Pebble Beach contracts with Carmel for one-third of the capacity of its sewage treatment plant.

The $13.7 million wastewater reclamation project was undertaken to comply with a state mandate to cease discharge into Carmel Bay — which has been designated an Area of Special Biological Significance — during most months of the year.

"I'd like us to make a move to find a new and better way of doing things," Lord told the Carmel board. "I'd like to think there are ways we could stand together to find them.

"We agree on the principle of reclamation. We should take a fresh start. If we presented a united front to the authorities, it couldn't hurt us and it might help us."

Lord implored the Carmel board to name a committee to meet with a committee from Pebble Beach to "write a piece of paper to see what we agree on, to assure the people in the grant business that we can get along."

CHARLOTTE TOWNSEND, chairwoman of the Carmel board, was somewhat skeptical of Lord's peace offering.

"I'm pleased you consider yourself in support of reclamation," she said. "Without your personal intervention with the Monterey Peninsula Country Club, we would have started on our (reclamation) project by now."

Townsend said she would "take under advisement" his suggestion to name a committee, and would consider action after the new board members are seated.

District counsel Don Freeman advised the Carmel Sanitary District against such a move.

"I do not recommend you sit down and talk about anything with them until final judgment is entered in the lawsuit," Freeman said.

"I have difficulty with some of your reasoning," remarked board member Ken McGinnis. "You say you're for reclamation and you also say the best alternative is to put an outfall past the Area of Special Biological Significance."

"Our position is in favor or reclamation," Lord responded. "But we decry the extended outfall as wasteful. We think those who gain the benefits of reclamation should share in the project."

In other business, the Carmel Sanitary District board of directors decided to inform the Monterey County Flood Control and Water Conservation District it will not share costs of flood control measures in lower Carmel Valley.

The flood control district sent the sanitary district a copy of the recent George Nolte Associates study of flood hazard mitigation measures and asked whether it would bear some of the expenses of any future flood control projects.

One of the proposed flood mitigation measures is construction of a circular "ring levee" around the sanitary district treatment plant at a cost of some $75,000.

"I do not see a benefit to the extent we should share in costs of the ring levee," advised district manager Michael Zambory. "Our treatment plant is constructed to withstand a 100-year flood. Why this district should support the protection of private land upstream is the question."

Director Jim Pruitt suggested that the flood control district be informed by letter that "our plant is designed to withstand a 100-year flood and we feel a ring levee has no value to us."

"It seems to me they should get some support from the business community and from the developers who are trying so hard to develop everything," said director Vernon Head.

The board voted unanimously to give all employees a 2.5 percent salary increase effective Jan. 1, 1982. The increase is in addition to a 10 percent adjustment which employees received on July 1.

RETIRING members of the board of directors of the Carmel Sanitary District received plaques which recognize their years of service at last Thursday's meeting. Vernon Head (left) has served on the board four years and James Pruitt (right) has been a director since 1954. Chairwoman Charlotte Townsend (center) presented the awards. They will be replaced by John Floyd and David Tedrow. (Laura Cotenas photo).

THANKSGIVING spirit was in evidence last week as pre-schoolers in the Mid-Valley Parent Nursery School dressed up in Indian costumes as part of their study of Indians and Pilgrims, under director Marilyn McMasters.

Society to show chess 'madness' film

The fine line that separates genius from insanity is crossed in Wolfgang Petersen's brilliant film about chess, Black and White Like Day and Night.

The film is about a master chess player who slides into madness. One minute he's playing 60 opponents simultaneously; the next he's trying to blow up the chess table. He will do absolutely anything to win, even if it means losing his wife, his career and his sanity. It is not hard to make comparisons with real-life chess champions.

The movie, presented by the Monterey Peninsula Film Society, is a German-language film with subtitles, in color. It will be shown at 8:15 p.m. Friday, Nov. 27 and Saturday, Nov. 28 at the Morse Auditorium, 425 Van Buren, Monterey.

A Japanese film, Gate of Hell, will be shown at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 2 at the same location. The film, which concerns a beautiful woman who is loved by a scoundrel, was Grand Prize winner at the Cannes Film Festival in 1953. It is in color with subtitles.

Admission to either film is $3 general and $2.50 for Film Society members. For more information phone 659-4795.

Studies show most normal teenagers are happy

By MARILYN MACHLOWITZ

IT MAY SOUND like psychiatric heresy, but behavioral studies increasingly suggest that most normal teenagers are actually happy.

Constant tumult and pain are not the necessary prerequisites for moving on to a tranquil adulthood, according to this research — although a popular and, to some extent, professional perception holds that they are.

"Eighty-five percent of the adolescents we tested report being happy most of the time," say Drs. Daniel Offer, Eric Ostrov and Kenneth I. Howard in their forthcoming book, The Adolescent, a Psychological Self-Portrait.

Their research, the latest of a number of studies with similar findings, will be published by Basic Books next month. It reflects the work of this team of researchers and their associates in surveying teen-agers throughout the world.

Offer, who began the research with a study in 1962, is chairman of the department of psychiatry at Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago. Ostrov is director of forensic psychology at Michael Reese, and Howard is professor of psychology at Northwestern University.

The questionnaire used by the team has reached 20,000 teen-agers. Statistical methods were employed to select from them a representative group of 1,300 normal youngsters for the current analysis.

The designation "normal" was broadly defined: Normal teen-agers were those who were in attendance in high school at the time the questionnaire was distributed. Other analyses by the team looked at delinquent teen-agers and at the psychiatrically and physically ill.

IN THE BOOK, expanding on their earlier published research, the authors say they tend to view adolescence as simply one of a number of life's periods of "normative crisis," in the phrase of the analyst and writer Erik Erikson.

During this period, teen-agers learn to face the need for increased autonomy from their parents, the development of sexuality and the unavoidable awareness that their bodies are rapidly changing.

But are teen-agers frightened or repelled by the changes in their bodies? Seven out of 10 teen-agers in this study said they liked the changes.

Are they in constant conflict with their parents? "The generation gap so often written about is not in evidence among the majority of subjects we studied," said the authors. "They perceive their parents as being satisfied with them and they do not seem to harbor bad feelings toward their parents."

The analysis of youngsters in high school did not paint an entirely blissful picture,

'Adults often see in the physical and sexual development of teen-agers a painful assertion of their own aging and they therefore try to keep teen-agers at a safe distance'

however. About 20 percent reported "feeling empty emotionally, being confused most of the time, or hearing strange noises."

In addition, the authors write, "The data indicate that anxiety is relatively prevalent among normal teen-angers." This anxiety, however, is brought on by individual situations, such as a date or a test. It is not "pervasive, unceasing tenseness."

OFFER AND HIS associates found some sex differences in the responses of normal adolescents. On several scales measuring how teen-agers view themselves, for instances, girls reported feeling worse about themselves than did boys. The girls more often said they felt lonely, sad, confused and ashamed.

Over 40 percent of the girls said they frequently felt ugly and unattractive. But the authors asserted that the similarities between the feelings of girls and boys were more prevalent than the differences.

Far sadder than normal youngsters were juvenile delinquents, who saw themselves as "anxious, lonely, and very unhappy," the study said. "Many juveniles delinquents continuously worry about their health and think of themselves as being physically vulnerable."

Offer said, in a telephone interview, that he and his colleagues could only speculate as to why the impression of widespread teen-age sadness and turmoil has taken such a firm hold. They believe that adults often see in the physical and sexual development of teen-agers a painful assertion of their own aging and that they therefore try to keep teen-agers at a safe distance by generalizing about them rather than seeing them as individuals. Thus, they use the evidence that some teen-agers are troubled to conclude that all are equally so. Or else, Offer said, pointing to the impression of adolescents during the 1960s, "they idealize them, make them prophets of our future."

The researchers know that their use of a questionnaire may be disparaged as a weak way to get at the truth, since nothing prevents respondents from distorting their feelings and masking the unconscious even more thoroughly than they could in an interview. But they defend the method virgorously as a valid "form of communication."

"The kids," observed Ostrov in a telephone interview, "were not uniformly glowing about their self-image. Many of them did say they were anxious. So they were not simply sitting there fooling us about how wonderful they feel."

Howard added, "We were studying the way kids see themselves; that was our focus. Of course, somebody looking at unconscious conflict wouldn't do it with a questionnaire."

IN A REPORT published in the Archives of General Psychiatry earlier this year, these same researchers illustrated the pitfalls before professional clinicians who assume they know how teen-agers feel. The professionals were asked to answer a questionnaire as if they were teen-agers. They did not succeed in the emulation; for the most part their responses were sadder than those of real teen-agers answering the same questions.

If teen-agers in high school are on the whole happier than thought, why has adolescent suicide seemed so prevalent? Offer notes that the rise in the suicide rate was recorded from 1956 to 1976 and it appeared to decline somewhat afterwards.

The viewpoint this team brings to adolescence, however, is not to downplay the tragic difficulties some teen-agers face. Rather it is intended to help parents, teachers and others recognize seriously disturbed adolescents for what they are.

Offer said that, in general, one knows a teen-ager is in trouble if the youngster is doing poorly in three or four of several critical areas; if the turmoil at home is constant, the fights between parent and child explosive and repeated often, if unhappiness lasts for days on end, if the teen-ager has difficulty making friends, doesn't do well at school, has a lot of psychosomatic compaints or meager plans for the future.

"Teenagers who need help," Offer says, "don't grow out of it, they become adults who need help."

"What we are saying," Howard added, "is that troubled behavior can't just be dismissed as being typically adolescent — the kids are being shorthchanged when we do."

Symphony group receives $3,000 Crosby grant

The Monterey County Symphony Association has received a $3,000 grant from the Bing Crosby Youth Fund to help fund its Concerts for Youth given each spring for the elementary schools.

Established in 1973, the program consists of in-school demonstrations given by Symphony musicians to all the elementary schools in the county. Fourth and fifth graders are provided firsthand experience with the different instrument families of the orchestra (brass, woodwind, string and percussion) and are exposed to music ranging from the symphonic repertoire to recognizable popular music.

The program is culminated by four concerts performed by the Monterey County Symphony, enabling the students to observe how the instrument families relate to each other within the context of an orchestral program.

More than 5,000 young people participate in the program, the association estimates.

Santa Catalina students earn scholastic honors

Fifteen local students are listed on the honor roll at Santa Catalina School for the mid-semester ending Oct. 30. The honor roll has two categories: Gold Cord for students who have maintained an A or A- average, and a second category for those who have maintained at least a B average.

Honor roll students are Julia Janko, Isabel Haley, Martha Ham, Rachel Mendelson and Barbara Rowe of Carmel; Christine Balestrieri, Melody Bender, Krysia Belza, Carlita Miraco (Gold Cord), Theresa Puleo, Sara von Schwind and Seaneen Scott of Pebble Beach; and Tara Davey, Gretha Honsvald and Susan Lockwood of Carmel Valley.

Diabetics take charge of care

Armed with new home diagnostic techniques, diabetics are increasingly taking charge of managing their disease, says Joann Davis, a Salinas diabetes educator.

Davis and Dr. Allen King, also of Salinas, will present a program called "Home Blood Glucose Monitoring," from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 2 at the Salvation Army Community Center, 501-A Hoffman Ave., Monterey.

Davis says a diabetic whose blood sugar level is not regularly monitored could be in danger of illness without realizing it.

"It's like driving your car without a speedometer," she says. "You don't know how fast you're going."

However, with the new diagnostic techniques Davis and King will discuss, patients can read their glucose levels with a finger stick and a simple smear — much cheaper and more convenient than a trip to the doctor.

Patients "are really taking charge of managing their disease," says Davis.

The program is free. For more information phone 624-6921.

Father Farrell's wisdom

God's 'law of love says it all'

Invocation to meeting
Sons in Retirement, October, 1981

Almost 100 years ago, an eccentric Anglican deacon and mathematics professor at Oxford wrote Alice in Wonderland under the pseudonym Lewis Carroll. This novel appeals to both young and old, and many of its characters have become part of the world's folklore.

The duchess says, "'Tis so; 'tis true, oh 'tis true; 'tis love that makes the world go round."

Having said this and argued that it is true, we can now argue that no four letter word in the English language is so abused, misused and misunderstood as LOVE.

Once, on a trip to New York, I saw a powerful but morbid play by Graham Green, The Living Room. In one scene, an elderly priest in a wheelchair berates his two old maid sisters over the suicide of their niece. "Do you think if she had come into a house where there was love she would not have hesitated, thought twice and talked to us?"

Oh Lord, help us to understand that your law of love says it all, and may we realize that love is so misunderstood in all walks of life because most of us are neither walking, jogging, nor running but standing on the sidelines of life trying to hitch a free ride. Amen.

CARMEL FIRE FIGHTERS SAVE MUCH PROPERTY

Shortly before six o'clock on Saturday evening the community was startled by a vigorous and prolonged fire alarm.

The new Basham cottage on Carmelo Avenue was in flames. Every member of the fire department and a number of willing assistants responded promptly.

The burning building was situated in the midst of a veritable jungle of dry brush and weeds, and was entirely destroyed.

The fact that a number of other buildings were not laid in ruins may be attributed to the effective work and foresight of the fire department.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Bashman were in the house several times during the day. It had been their intention to move into the place on Sunday.

The cause of the fire is not know, but it is thought to have resulted from an exploding can of shellac.

PLANS FOR CREATING EMPLOYMENT OUTLINED AT GROUP CONFERENCE

Detailed plans for the creating of more jobs for Carmel residents who are out of work and financing measures to bring relief to those in need were outlined at a meeting Monday night of civic and church leaders representing 12 different organizations in the city.

It was announced that through the courtesy of David J. Bolton, general manager of the Monterey Theatre Co., the Carmel theatre will give three benefit performances. All money obtained at these performances will be turned over to the relief group which hereafter will be known as the Carme Employment Commission.

It was outlined at the meeting that a number of other attractions will be staged during the next few months to increase the benefit fund. Ms. Clara Kellogg, representing the City Council, declared that as much work as possible would be planned by the street department in order to give more employment to local residents.

PLANNING COMMISSION REVIEWS LANDSCAPING

Since the Planning Commission is primarily concerned with the beauty of Carmel, it is encouraging that many landscaping areas and planter boxes in the business district are being cared for.

Among the properties outstanding in the business district for good landscaping is the Pine Inn, which has maintained a whole block for a great length of time with a delightful variety of shrubs, flowers and edgings.

The Carmel Craft Studios have also created a most attractive area at the entrance with small shrubs, interesting sculpture and rock plants.

The Presbyterian Church is already well landscaped with low spreading ceanothus among the oaks and many nice shrubs in the grounds. The All Saints' Church is particularly notable for its fine planting. In fact, all the churches add to the charm of the village by their good gardening.

Some planter boxes which have been carefully reserved at the outset by the Planning commission have been sadly neglected however, and it is hoped that public-spirited citizens will not allow this to continue.

As a whole, the landscaping of the Village is being recognized as one of our chief concerns.

CITY GRAPPLES FOR ANSWER TO DOWNTOWN APARTMENT SHORTAGE

On Tuesday the planning commission will meet to discuss ways to make apartment development in the commercial district more feasible.

Among the main questions to be considered:

—Present restrictions require that there be 1,000 square feet of site area per apartment unit. The commission may lower the site area per apartment unit to 666 square feet.

—It is now required that there be an off-street parking space provided for each apartment unit. The commission is debating whether to require that the parking be underground and whether to reduce the one-parking-space-per-apartment unit requirement.

Why is there a need for more apartments in the commercial district?

According to a report of the planning commission staff, more apartments are required "in order to fill the needs of the permanent population desiring to live in apartments."

PLANNERS GET FIRST LOOK AT GARZAS SUBDIVISION

A preliminary map for a 25-home subdivision at the western end of Garzas Road was submitted to the Monterey County Planning Commission last week by co-developers William Garland and Richard Volpert.

The development, officially labelled Rancho Del Monte Subdivision No. 14, will have 25-one-acré homesites fanning across a parcel of 28.3 acres on the southern side of Garzas Road. Existing homes directly opposite the proposed subdivision are on half-acre sites.

Realtor Skip Marquard said the subdivision "is in keeping with the immediate area" and will fill a great need for homesites between the mid-Valley and the Village.

Residents of the immediate area, however, made it clear that they oppose the development unless another access route is provided.

POLICEMAN'S JOB VARIED

Former Carmel police chief Clyde Klauman used to boast that Carmel policemen were more than just law enforcers — they were part community relations expert.

Carmel police tact came to test last Saturday when Sgt. Walter Boyle was called to the scene of an Ordinance Code violation at the corner of Lincoln and 5th. Planning Commissioner Dorothea Roberts complained that a woman was playing an amplified guitar at the location.

Boyle reports: "Checked and located young blond female singing like a meadowlark, dressed in a Salvation Army uniform.

"The tourist population at this location ran in the thousands and some of them were already snapping my picture before I could stop the car.

"Discretion being the better part of valor, I changed my course and had the desk officer make contact with the captain of the Salvation Army Band by land line — to have the singer cease and desist."

EQUESTRIAN TEAM TAKES HONORS

THE RIGHT REV. G. Shannon Mallory, Bishop of the Monterey Episcopal Diocese, will present the sermon at the ecumenical Thanksgiving Day Service at Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula.

An ecumenical Thanksgiving Day service will be held Thursday, Nov. 26 at 10 a.m. at the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula, Carmel Valley Rd., one mile east of Hwy. 1, Carmel.

The Right Rev. C. Shannon Mallory, Bishop, Episcopal Diocese, Monterey will present the sermon.

The service is sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Ministerial Association. Participating congregations include Methodist, Presbyterian, Unitarian, Congregation Beth Israel, Salvation Army and Assembly of God. A special choir composed of members of all the participating churches will provide music.

Those attending are invited to bring a canned food item for distribution by the Salvation Army to needy families.

The Rev. Margaret Kiep, co-pastor of the First Unitarian Church and president of the Monterey Peninsula Ministerial Association, emphasized that the service will be limited to one hour to enable persons to participate in other Thanksgiving activities.

HARPIST SUSANN McDONALD will lead students of her Harp Master Class in a recital at 8 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 28, at Hidden Valley Theater, Ford and Carmel Valley Rds., Carmel Valley. McDonald, who has appeared before audiences throughout the world, is head of the Juilliard School of Music Harp Department. Tickets for the recital are $8.

Illustrator Tasha Tudor to sign books in Carmel

Famed illustrator and author Tasha Tudor will visit Carmel on Tuesday, Dec. 1 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. for an autograph party at The Thunderbird Bookshop in The Barnyard.

Tudor, known primarily for her children's books, will autograph copies of Take Joy!, The Tasha Tudor Christmas Book that was first published in 1966. The book is a compilation of poems, carols, legend and lore, and even some recipes from the Tudor farm.

The book contains some of the greatest Christmas stories ever written, including The Fir Tree, by Hans Christian Andersen, The Gift of the Magi, by O. Henry; and excerpts from A Child's Christmas in Wales, by Dylan Thomas.

Throughout, of course, are the warm, touching drawings and watercolors of Tasha Tudor — children tumbling downstairs on Christmas morning; a lusty medieval banquet, including a whole boar's head; and several drawings and paintings of the Baby Jesus, resplendent in a light-filled manger.

It's hard to say whether the drawings illustrate the text or the text complements the drawings. Either way, Take Joy! is a beautiful production. The book costs $10.95. For more information phone 624-1803.

Season tickets go on sale

Season tickets for two Italian operas and The Fantasticks, the famous off-Broadway musical, are now on sale for $25 per person at Hidden Valley Music Seminars in Carmel Valley.

The $25 season ticket represents a $5 savings over the single-ticket price for all three shows, plus a $2.50 dinner discount coupon for single use at any of 10 area restaurants. Season ticket holders are also given their choice of performance dates, reserved section seating and other benefits.

Patrons' tickets, which include a $50 tax-deductible contribution, are available for $75.

Rolfing, the system of deep massage that helps realign the body, will be examined at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Nov. 30, when certified rolfer Gene Sage gives a free lecture and demonstration at Cherry Hall, Fourth and Guadalupe in Carmel.

Dodge Gallery schedules grand opening

The Bill W. Dodge Gallery has moved to a lovely new location in the Court of the Fountains, Mission and Seventh, Carmel. The move more than quadruples its floorspace.

To celebrate the move, Dodge has planned a grand opening from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 28, complete with champagne and hors d'oeuvres. The public is invited.

The spaciousness of the new gallery allows Dodge, himself a noted American primitive artist, to exhibit the work of several other important primitive painters. They include 87-year-old Carmel artist Donald MacKubbin, who has chronicled his boyhood memories of the Eastern United States; John Lim, Canada's foremost native artist; Oku, a Japanese working in New York's Greenwich Village; and Hans Lauridsen, a traditionalist primitive.

For more information phone 625-5636.

CIRCUS CITY, Artist Bill Dodge's delightful vision of San Francisco, is typical of the colorful primitives that grace his new gallery at the Court of the Fountains, Mission and Seventh, Carmel. The gallery, with four times the space of his old quarters, allows Dodge to display the work of other primitive painters besides himself, including 87-year-old Carmel painter Donald MacKubbin. A public reception will mark the opening days of the gallery on Saturday, Nov. 28, from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m.

A Thank You...And an Invitation from

Bill W. Dodge

"I personally want to thank residents and visitors alike for the especially warm welcome you have given me and my work during the seven months since I opened my gallery. Your enthusiastic support has made it necessary to expand into a larger location. I am deeply grateful to each of you who has made this possible.

"Our new gallery permits us to add a select group of primitive and naive artists of exceptional merit, all of whom I have hanging in my personal collection. They range from an 87-year-old chronicler of his childhood memories, Don MacKubbin, to a contemporary naive, John Lim, with a totally unique style never before exhibited in the West.

"We would like to share the joy of this childlike world of art at the grand opening of our new location. I will look forward to welcoming each of you personally this Saturday."

Vasquez rides again in 'Bandido!'

San Juan Bautista's El Teatro Campesino is presenting a flamboyant new melodrama based on the life of Tiburcio Vasquez, the notorious bandit, from Dec. 5 through January 31.

Bandido! is the work of Luis Valdez, resident playwright and artistic director of the theater. Valdez has had a play on Broadway, Zoot Suit, which was later made into a movie.

The sensational exploits and robberies of Tiburcio Vasquez thrilled and terrorized the whole state of California until he was caught and hanged in San Jose in 1875. According to Valdez, he should rank with Jesse James, Billy the Kid and Joaquin Murrieta as a true-blue bad guy to be celebrated in song and story.

All tickets are $25 for the play's premiere, Dec. 5, and for a New Year's Eve Gala performance. At other times the price settles down to $10 for adults and $9 for senior citizens and military Friday and Saturday; and $9 for adults, $8 for senior citizens, students and military and $4 for children weekdays and Sundays.

Performance times are 8 p.m. except Sunday, which is 7:30 p.m. There are Saturday and Sunday matinees at 2 p.m. Performances are generally Thursday through Sunday, but there are some Tuesday and Wednesday performances in December.

The group, directed by Vahe Aslanian of the Hartnell College music faculty, is composed of 16 singers and is sometimes accompanied by a small chamber orchestra led by Owen Dunsford.

The Camerata Singers will perform two more concerts next spring. An evening of Opera and Musical Theater Highlights will be presented at 3 p.m. March 4 in the Kelley Gallery, Monterey; and again at 3 p.m., March 7 in the Madonna del Sasso Church, Salinas.

Choral Music, Old and New, the third concert, will be a program of madrigals, chansons and ballads sung May 16 and 20 in Salinas and Monterey.

Music Corner

Beautiful sounds from Linda Jacoby

By LYN BRONSON

A HEAVY DRIZZLE may have kept some concert-goers away, but approximately 350 devoted fans of the piano showed up to inaugurate a new piano series called Young Keyboard Artists at Sunset Center in Carmel last Saturday night.

One of the first things an observer noticed at Saturday night's concert is that although there were some familiar faces, the majority of those present represented people who are not regular subscribers to the established concert series.

The focus of attention during the evening was the piano playing of Ingrid Jacoby, 22-year-old pianist from Los Angeles who is moving to London in January to further her career and honor recital commitments in England and Europe.

Miss Jacoby opened her program with the Mozart Sonata in B Flat Major, K.333, a sonata remarkable for the energetic and difficult finale with its concerto-like cadenza.

Miss Jacoby had to overcome certain problems inherent in the instrument she was playing, which has a brittle-sounding treble section. Most of the first movement of the Mozart was concentrated in this area and hence tended to have a little too much sting, especially in louder passages.

In the slow movement, the tonal center moved down a fifth into a much mellower area of the piano, and suddenly Miss Jacoby showed us what beautiful sounds she can make at the piano.

The finale represented a return to the brittle part of the piano, and although the sound suffered, the musicianship triumphed with a grandiose sweep that carried us along through the cadenza and the coda.

Miss Jacoby's playing of Estampes was characterized by a cool restraint and dealt in subtle, somber hues in the first two episodes — Pagodes and Soiree dans Granada — but in the closing section Gardens in the Rain, Miss Jacoby really came to life with a deft showering of notes. She made it all seem very easy.

After a stately performance of the Chopin Ballade in A Flat Major, Op. 47, Miss Jacoby presented the major work of the evening, Moussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition.

Like many musicians, Miss Jacoby has regarded this mighty piece as a flawed work and has tried her hand at some improvement. She has reinforced the structure by adding certain octaves in the bass and filling in and adding to chords in the treble. These are minor liberties for the most part and well within the limits of good taste.

Miss Jacoby gave us again a restrained and almost too classical view of this noble work. There was so much really beautiful playing, and all that was needed was a more overwhelming percussive sonority to put over the last two sections, The Hut of Baba Yaga and the Great Gate of Kiev.

The audience responded warmly and was rewarded by two encores, an Etude by Bartok and a Sonata by Scarlatti.

We've got to stop meeting like this!

Film review:

Unexciting, simple-minded 'Southern Comfort'

By LISA JENSEN

Screnwriter-turned-director Walter Hill apparently never tires of exploring male-bonding rituals in allegorical tales of men in crisis. The Warriors dealt with a New York City street gang making its way to home turf through miles of "enemy territory" belonging to rival gangs, while The Long Riders chronicled the last gasp of the outlaw James-Younger gang in the waring days of the Old West.

The simulated "war zone" allegory is more specific in Southern Comfort. This story of untrained, white-collar National Guardsmen lost in the Louisiana bayou is meant to parallel the situation of American soldiers adrift in the steaming jungles of Vietnam. Survival under stress is again the theme, but this time Hill has devised the toughest challenge yet for his band of macho heroes. As if grueling swamps and murdering Cajuns weren't bad enough, the protagonists of Southern Comfort have to contend with one of Hill's least exciting and most simple-minded scripts to date.

A troop of Louisiana Guardsmen on weekend maneuvers in the bayou "borrow" some unattended Cajun canoes to rendezvous with the rest of their unit. When some angry Cajuns pursue them, the soldiers yell insults while the company moron opens fire on their pursuers with a round of blanks. Understandably, the Cajuns retaliate with real bullets; in their chaotic retreat, the Guardsmen lose their map, compass and sargeant, who's killed in the melee.

Now lost in the swamp, the bewildered weekend soldiers search in vain for the interstate highway that will carry them to salvation, as the battle lines between them and the Cajun "enemy" are more drawn. The part-time soldiers who make up the guard troop behave in a grotesque parody of what they consider standard military procedure, beating and torturing the first Cajun they meet after blowing his modest shack to smithereens. Meanwhile, the Cajuns wage guerilla warfare, setting hunting dogs on the intruders, booby-trapping the swamps with falling trees, and picking off the soldiers one by one.

Hill's point about the tragedy of ordinary men plunged for no good reason into a savage nightmare would have more resonance if the protagonists in Southern Comfort weren't such cretinous fools and so totally responsible for everything that happens to them.

After shooting at the Cajuns unprovoked, verbally and physically abusing them, destroying their property and kidnapping an innocent bystander, the Guardsmen can't seem to grasp why the Cajuns are mad at them. And it never occurs to anyone to climb one of those huge trees to try and spot the highway or to fire their blanks to attract the attention of the rescue helicopter searching for them overhead.

Keith Carradine, as a pragmatic good ol' boy, and Powers Booth as a cynical loner are the only members of the company who aren't either dim-witted rednecks, raving loons or both. And they're so busy trying to out-cool each other (Carradine's insouciant grin vs. Booth's smoldering eyes) that they barely have time to interact with anyone else, or the movie itself.

In fact, there's very little interaction of any kind going on here. Without either the kinetic energy of The Warriors or the deeply layered relationships of all those brothers in The Long Riders, Southern Comfort is an ineptly conceived skeleton of tiresome macho cliches.

Sounds of Christmas will echo in Center

By RICHARD TYLER

Once again sounds of Christmas will echo through the Sunset Theater on Saturday, December 5, when the community gathers for the Fifth Annual Christmas in Carmel celebration at 3 p.m.

The program continues to have the familiar format of previous years with the choir made up of choir members from the many churches in our area as well as volunteers who just want to sing on the stage. They will also lead the audience in singing the songs of many lands and will perform several numbers by themselves . . . all led by Mrs. Ann Welchner who has been a part of this community endeavor since its inception.

The musical portion of the afternoon will last approximately an hour. The program will be followed by a social hour during which traditional holiday sweets will be served. Local bakeries have contributed to this sweet table annually; but as usual, we welcome contributions and baking from the residents. Plan to bring your favorite sweet and share it with a neighbor.

Many organizations, fraternal clubs, banks, and ethnic groups have participated in past years and generously offer their contributions for the happening this year.

Drawings by youngsters of the River School, the Middle School, and the Lyceum will adorn the walls of the foyer during the holiday season. A number of Girl Scout and Brownie troops are fast at work creating hangings for the huge Christmas tree donated by the Kiwanis Club, which will also be in the foyer.

Part of the endeavor each year is in cooperation with the Salvation Army which sponsors a Christmas Bureau Basket. If you would like to share your holiday with others, plan to bring a gift wrapped with the age of the child on the outside or some canned goods for Christmas baskets. Boy Scouts will attend the tree and will be there to accept your gifts.

Of course, Santa Claus will make his first local appearance of the season at the Christmas in Carmel Celebration and will be eager to hear from the children of the community.

The response for assistance and involvement in this holiday community effort has been so enthusiastic in the past that I am certain that everyone is looking forward to participating again this year. Your contribution of time or effort is greatly appreciated in this community project.

If you missed this warm and neighborly activity last year, plan to join in this community rejoicing of the holiday season. It is free and starts at 3 p.m., on Saturday, December 5, at Sunset Theater, located at 9th and San Carlos in Carmel. If you have any questions regarding the afternoon, please call the director's office at 624-3996.

Backgammon

Drop your anchor

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

You, White, roll 5-4 in the diagrammed position. Since you have a man on the bar, you must come in on Black's 5-point. How do you play the four?

Don't dream of hitting the Black blot even though you have a three-point board while Black has only a two-point board. The odds are 3 to 1 that Black will come in at his next roll; and he has a fair chance of hitting you as he does so. Meanwhile, your two men on his 1-point have lost their golden opportunity to advance to a good exit from Black's board.

Move the four at this roll with one of the men on Black's 1-point, thus making Black's 5-point. It is almost always a fine idea to make your opponent's 5-point early in the game. From that fine anchorage you will later be able to get your men out and avoid being gammoned. If you leave your men on the 1-point, a gammon is not at all unlikely.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send 50 cents plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

Temperament in dogs

By JUDITH A. EISNER

TEMPERAMENT is something we often talk about with respect to our pets. We speak of our dogs and cats as being "good-tempered." and breeders advertise their young stock as having "ideal" or "stable temperament."

Temperament, the way we use the word, means the mental characteristics of an individual animal. But, interestingly, temperament is closely related to words like "temper" and "temperance" and, of course, "temperamental."

The temperament you prefer in your pets is a highly personal thing. Most of us who want dogs to be a part of our family prefer very friendly, gentle animals that get along well with all people.

Under other circumstances, especially when used for guard, sentry or attack work, dogs are preferred to have more "fiery temperaments" or who, in the vernacular, are "sharper" tempered.

How many times have you heard someone say, "Oh, he wouldn't bite a fly" in response to his dog's ferocious-sounding barking? And how often have you approached someone's house, to the sound of blood-curdling snarls only to have that savage watchdog materialize into a tail-wagging, hand-licking dog who seems to be trying to apologize for his lack of manners in barking at you?

Temperament in dogs depends on both heredity and environment. That is, the dog's nature is directly the result of his ancestors' temperaments and the way he has been raised. Environment, under careful control, can outweigh heredity and turn a dog who inherits a tendency toward sharpness into a well-mannered individual. Rarely, however, can a gentle upbringing and careful training completely subdue that fiery nature; it can merely temper it.

KONRAD LORENZ, the great Austrian ethologist, has cleverly separated dogs into two types he calls "lupus" and "jackal" dogs. The lupus dogs, he claims, are those tracing direct descent from wolves, while the jackal dogs, which account for the majority of recognized breeds today, descend from the jackel of ancient times.

Lorenz typifies the lupuis dogs (and these include the German Shepherd and all the sled dog breeds — Siberian Husky, Malamute, Samoyed, etc.) as being more mature in their affection and behavior than the "immature" jackal dogs. Lupus dogs, when they mature, regard their human masters as pack leaders, to be respected but not necessarily obeyed. Lupus dogs are more independent than jackal dogs, and are likely to question commands and willfully disobey their master. In short, they think for themselves and form more nearly one-to-one relationships with their owners than the jackal dogs.

Jackal dogs, Lorenz believes, never fully mature into a pack leader relationship with their owners. Rather, they remain puppyishly immature and fawning, looking upon all humans as friends and playmates. Lorenz finds the jackal dog temperament lacking as he objects to a dog who is equally adoring of any person who comes along.

Lorenz's theory on dog temperament seems to make sense in light of the countless overly-friendly dogs we own — and in view of the suspicion with which we regard the lupus dogs. German Shepherds are traditionally distrusted by strangers — which, coupled with their lupus temperament, makes them outstanding watchdogs. Because lupus-blooded dogs are more reserved, more one-manish by nature, we approach them with caution; they are not especially open to friendly advances. We get the same feeling when we meet the sled dog breeds.

YOU CAN TAKE a lupus dog at a young age and, by raising it with love, kindness and respect for its individuality, end up with a gentle, affectionate, trustworthy dog that feels great allegiance for its "pack" of humans. At the same time, it will be protective toward its "territory" (your home) and not unwilling to stand up in defense of these things.

On the other hand, you can take a jackal dog into your home, mistreat it horribly, and it will still look at you adoringly — albeit with some fear. Or, you can raise a jackal-dog puppy with love and kindness and try to make it act lovable reserved toward strangers — chances are, you'll fail. The loveable and gentle pets we keep, although they may bark at strangers, hardly ever bite — and, let's not forget that for the most part, we don't want them to.

Incidentally, the barking of the non-lupus breeds dates back to dim pre-history when man probably first domesticated these wild jackals for their barking at enemies and alerting him to danger. Later he discovered — most likely by accident — that jackals could help him at both tracking and bringing down prey, and the domesticating process continued further.

Today, most of us want a good natured family pet who's also a "good watchdog." Usually, what we mean is a dog who barks when someone approaches the house. Few of us are willing to assume the responsibility for a dog who backs up his bark.

Lorenz, who was pleased with the lupus dog's reserve and maturity, was displeased with the independence that led them to disobey orders or take off on their own for days at a time. He intentionally crossbred Alsatians (German Shepherds) with Chows, which he considered the most jackal-like of the modern breeds, and produced a dog that combines the best qualities of both.

A BABY BOBCAT typifies Jacquie Marie Vaux's exquisite sense of detail in her watercolor paintings of wild animals. Every hair, every blade of grass stands out, while the expression in the little fellow's eyes manages to convey both his infant tenderness and the dignity of the adult creature he will become.

Vaux and seascape artist Mario Simic are having a joint show at Simic Galleries, San Carlos between Fifth and Sixth, Carmel, through Dec. 5. Champagne receptions open to the public begin at 6 p.m. Friday, Nov. 27 and Saturday, Nov. 28.

Two-artist show at Simic Galleries

Wildlife artist Jacquie Marie Vaux and noted painter Mario Simic are having a two-man show through Dec. 5 at Simic Galleries, San Carlos between Fifth and Sixth, Carmel.

Two champagne receptions are planned for the exhibit, the first on Friday, Nov. 27 from 6 to 9 p.m. and the second Saturday, Nov. 28 during the same hours. The artists will be present and the public is invited.

Vaux is nationally known for her exquisitely detailed wildlife studies. She captures not only the majesty, dignity and strength of wild animals, but their vulnerability as well. Her subjects range from the Okapi and Himalayan snow leopard to the cheetah, giraffe and bobcat. Although her chief concern is for endangered species, she also renders common animals such as the mouse, the raccoon and the hare with great sensitivity.

To view an exhibit of Jacquie Vaux paintings is to enter a beautiful wildlife preserve. As the artist said at her recent New York show, "I want people to be moved, to appreciate the relevance, the beauty of animals and to realize the world would be a much less beautiful place without them."

Both Vaux originals and limited edition lithographs will be on display.

Mario Simic, chiefly known for his seascapes, will display original work and two new limited edition oil-o-graphs at the show. For more information phone 624-7522.

CHRONIC PAIN

If you are the unfortunate victim of chronic pain, or one of those told you will just have to learn to live with aches and pains...
Clinical studies indicate that nothing could be further from the truth. Most victims of pain could be helped if they were less willing to accept pain on a permanent basis. Dramatic results are now achieved without the use of conventional drugs or surgery.

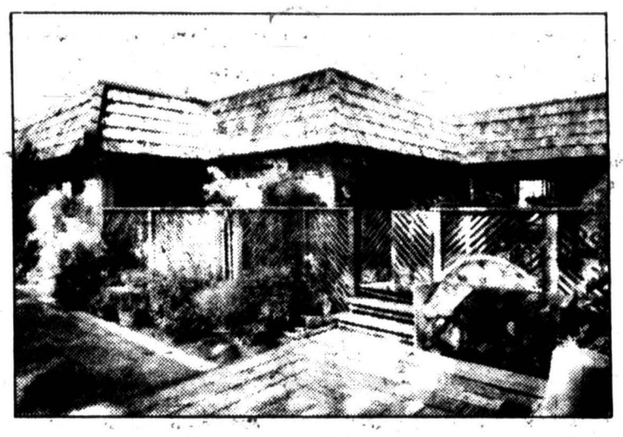
Unconventional Condominiums in Corral de Tierra Villas

You could get lost in this very unusual one story home. It's a nice orthodox 1875 sq. ft., but beyond that nothing is quite what you expect, everything is a refreshing surprise. Rooms evolve from a central core like spokes from a wheel. Each is entirely complete in itself, and the combined effect is a feeling of unexpected space.



To get oriented, you must understand this core. It's about 9 x 18, in the center of the house, and one of its walls faces you across the foyer as you enter. Within its limits are (a) two sizeable closets, (b) a completely hidden laundry and utility room, and (c) a glamorous, enclosed wet bar which opens to the living room.

Everything comes off the central hub. Going clockwise from the foyer, you'll find the dining room, kitchen, living room, a delightful patio, den (or bedroom), the master suite, a second bath, and the 3rd bedroom. Each of these has its own adjuncts.

For example, the dining room and kitchen face front and are separated by a service bar. The kitchen is compact, beautifully equipped, with hand-rubbed wood cabinets, white counters, luminous ceiling and a parquet floor.

The living room features a hand-carved pine mantel in the far corner and glass doors out to the secluded patio. Beyond that is a grassy rear garden, the only such private preserve in the entire complex. The den also opens to the patio and rear deck. It's wonderfully light, and the wall space is well planned for attractive placement of furniture.

The master bedroom is huge and opens to its own private deck. On the inboard side is a mirrored dressing area with lots of closets and a vanity; and beyond it the master bath with another vanity space, tub and shower. That bath is carpeted, as is the second bath which has recessed lighting, lovely shower and copious closet for linens. The front bedroom completes the circle and brings you back to the entrance, much wiser and more enchanted than when you started.

Corral de Tierra Villas is a charming condominium complex of about 60 units midway between Monterey and Salinas and just off Highway 68. Units are very handsome, very modern. There's tennis, a 9 hole par-3 golf course, pool and a versatile clubhouse — all yours to use. Unit No. 31, halfway around the circling drive, is $215,000.
